INQUIRY WILL BE SEARCHING

British and Canadian Governments to Probe River Disaster.

ROYAL COMMISSION WITH WIDE POWERS

Identification of Dead is Now Proceeding More Rapidly.

Ottawa, June 1.—The British and Canadian governments are co-operating to make a most thorough investigation into the sinking of the steamer Empress of Ireland. The disaster will be inquired into by a royal commission of three.

The British government has appointed George Vaux as its representative. He has already sailed from England and will reach Montreal June 8 when the inquiry will be started. The other two members of the commission will be judges of the Canadian admiralty court. While the committee is organizing Captain Lindsey, the wreck commissioner of the government, is carrying on a preliminary investigation preparing evidence and getting the case ready as far as possible.

Passengers to Testify.

All the passengers who were saved will be summoned to give evidence before Captain Lindsey and members of the crews of the Empress and of the boat which sank her to the bottom will be examined. The royal commission will report on what measures should be taken to make navigation in the narrow waters of the St. Lawrence more secure and whether there should be a revision of the rules which now govern shipping traffic in that river.

It is expected that a set of drastic rules will be prepared and that they will be thoroughly enforced.

..LIKE GREAT CAN-OPENER.

Sharp Point of Anchor Projected From Collier's Bow.

Montreal, June 1.—The sharp point of an anchor projecting from the twisted bow of the Norwegian collier Storstad may explain why that vessel did such terrible execution when she rammed the "Empress of Ireland" early last Friday morning in the lower St. Lawrence.

An examination of the collier's shattered plates revealed the anchor jammed in a position where it could have ripped through the hull of the Empress like a great can-opener. The anchor point and portions of the battered steel surrounding bore stains of blood.

Preparations were begun here today for the inquiry into the disaster, which cost at present reckoning 969 lives. The inquiry will be conducted by a joint commission of Canadian and British shipping experts. The arrangements for the inquiry, which will be held either here or in Quebec, are being made by Captain Lindsey, Dominion wreck commissioner.

GOMPERS TAKES RAP AT PASTOR

Criticizes Cleveland Man for Sermons Defending Rockefeller.

CAUSTIC IN ATTACK

Cleveland, O., June 1.—Samuel Gompers president of the American Federation of Labor, is in Cleveland to aid the school teachers who are striving to form a labor union in opposition to the wishes of the board of education today, attacked Rev. W. W. Bustard for his sermons preached Sunday evening in defense of the attitude of John D. Rockefeller in the Colorado mine strike. Bustard is pastor of Euclid Avenue Baptist church of which Rockefeller is a member and Sunday school superintendent.

Bustard declared in his sermon that complete unionization of the miners was the cause of the upheaval and that less than a third of the miners belonged to a union.

"His whole sermon showed mental bias," said Gompers. "Rev. Dr. Bustard said: "'And then what did the miners do?—they shot the guards and the guards shot the miners.' Why didn't he say the guards shot the miners first? He says the miners brought with them to this country all the pent up hatred and ignorance of foreign countries. If that is true, it is all the more true that the mine companies, their agents and representatives have induced this immigration to fill the places of American miners who can't work under the present conditions. The fact that Dr. Bustard admits that 'wages are too low and working conditions beastly' is the indictment against the companies' beastliness and tyranny and a refutation of the attempted apology and whitewash.

"The Ministerial associations are nothing more or less than a union of professional theologians."

REBELS STILL SHARP ISSUE

Question of Admission to Mediation Conference Yet Undecided.

ENVOYS TAKE A FIRM POSITION

Constitutionalists Must Conform to Demands to Secure Recognition.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 1.—After a two hour conference between the mediators and the American delegates today the question of admitting the Constitutionalists into the negotiations for the settlement of the Mexican problem was still undecided. It was learned however, that the desire of the United States to have the Constitutionalists heard before a final agreement is signed here has impressed the three mediators and they are taking a more favorable view of it.

Lamar Issues Statement.

After today's conference Justice Lamar dictated the following statement: "We had a conference this morning, in which we continued a discussion of points on which we had not agreed on Saturday. The matter is still under discussion but we found in our talk this morning that we were not so far apart in our construction of certain phases, and we are still quite hopeful."

The mediators have taken the position that they will admit the Constitutionalists if they are ready to agree

New York, June 1.—John D. Rockefeller and his son, John D. Rockefeller, jr., attended services at the Calvary Baptist church yesterday for the first time since Industrial Workers and socialists, under the leadership of Upton Sinclair, commenced to annoy them two months ago. The elder Mr. Rockefeller motored to the church from his home at Tarrytown, while his son walked from his house in West Fifty-fourth street. The guard of police and detectives was slightly larger because of the presence at the church of the Rockefellers. No disturbances occurred to mark their presence.

HISER JOINT IS WIPED OUT

Commissioners Refuse a License for Notorious Roadhouse.

NINTH WARDERS WIN BIG BATTLE

John Gutermuth Withdraws Petition for License on Spring Street.

The board of county commissioners Monday put the notorious roadhouse of George Hiser, northwest of the city on the Goshen road, out of business and this vicious den will cease from troubling the community next Friday, when its license expires.

At the same time the anti-saloon war in the Ninth ward came to an end when John Gutermuth witdhrew his petition to purchase the license of Charles Miller, 1717 Lafayette street, and transfer it to Spring street, where his proposal to open a saloon started the strenuous fight that came near resulting in making the Ninth ward dry.

Hiser Place Doomed.

George Hiser's roadhouse just outside the city limits has been an eyesore to Fort Wayne for many years. It has been the scene of countless orgies and the foregathering place of lewd women and tough men who went there to practice excesses that were not tolerated in the city even in the palmiest days of the wide-open town. The commissioners had marked the Hiser joint for extinction and he knew it. The place was raided one Saturday night a few weeks ago by Sheriff A. C. Gladieux and his deputies and Hiser realied that he could get no license.

Application was made for a license by Henry Trebenbach. When he appeared Monday morning for hearing on his application Messrs. Butt, Schwier and Black of the board of commissioners turned him down cold. He was held to be an unfit man to engage in the saloon business and he got the shortest shrift ever given an applicant in the commissioners' court. Trebenbach announted

The little girl's condition for a time was regarded as very grave, but medical aid was hurriedly summoned and the attending physicians were confident Monday that the child will recover.

INQUIRY WILL BE SEARCHING

told him that Anderson, his first officer, and Pilot Lechance, who brought the Storstad from Father Point to Quebec, were on the bridge at the time of the collision. "On the way up the river," continued Nault, "an examination was made to ascertain the extent of the damage to the Storstad. As far as we could learn only plates forward had been sprung, but aft the ship was undamaged. At Quebec the Storstad took in so much water that we were obliged to flood the aft compartments in order to keep the ships bow up. There was no water in the hold of the Storstad.

Anderson Deeply Grieved.

"Captain Anderson is deeply grieved over the tragedy. Several times during the trip from Quebec I came upon him crying with his face buried in his hands. Captain Anderson told me he had been instructed not to talk about the accident."

One of the officers of the Storstad said today: "At the time of the disaster I was lying in my bunk. I was awakened by a shock and at first thought the ship had struck a rock. I ran to the deck and looked over the side; the Storstad was going full speed astern. The water around was filled with struggling men and women shouting for help. Boats were immediately lowered and there was not a man on the Storstad who did not do his utmost to rescue the people in the water. We, in the boats, brought the survivors to the deck of the Storstad. From there they were taken into the engine room, the warmest place on the ship. Some of the survivors had been so numbed by the ice cold water that they leaned up against the cylinders of the engines and their flesh was blistered.

There was no change today in the official lists of saved and dead, which show that 418 persons escaped and 969 were killed or drowned.

Captain Anderson issued a statement last night in which he denied responsibility for the wreck. He says he had the right of way and that when he lost the Empress of Ireland in the fog she had changed her course.

The Storstad's course remained unaltered but when the Empress was next seen she was close at hand, but making considerable headway.

It is declared that the Storstad's engines were reversed and that the momentum was nearly checked when the vessels came together. As for the charge that the Storstad backed out of hole she made in the Empress, the statement says it was not true that the engines were ordered ahead so that the vessel might be held together, but that the Empress swerved to one side forcing the bow of the collier to the port side.

Shaughnessy in Statement.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, head of the Canadian Pacific railroad, issued a statement today thanking the people of Romouski and vicinity for the care and attention they gave to the living and the dead that came to them from the company's ill-fated steamer, Empress of Ireland.

Commander Tweedie, of his majesty's ship Essex, which has been abiding in the search for the bodies, said today that he believed it would be impossible to salvage the Empress of Ireland. He expressed the belief that the hull of the Empress will have to blown up with dynamite to prevent it becoming a menace to navigation. The services of divers from the Essex have been offered to the owners of the Empress. The divers may be used in an effort to recover a part of the valuable cargo and the bodies of some hundreds of persons now believed to b locked in sunken hull.

Irving's Body Found.

The body of Laurence Irving, the English actor, was picked up last night on the west bank of the St. Lawrence, below Romouski. This information reached Quebec today and was given out at the office of the Canadian Pacific railway. Irving's face was bruised almost beyond recognition. A signet ring with the initials "L. I." on one of his fingers, led to the identification. One hand still clutched a piece of cambric, probably torn from the night dress of his wife, whom he was making desperate efforts to save when they were last seen alive.

Capt. F. X. Pouliot, of the government steamer Lady Evelyn, reported today that he recovered the log book of the Empress of Ireland late Friday night while searching for bodies. The book was found in a water-tight metal box.

IDENTIFYING THE DEAD.

Work at Quebec Is Progressing Quite Rapidly.

Quebec, June 1.—Identification of the dead recovered from the scene of the wrecked steamer Empress of Ireland is proceeding more rapidly than was expected. Nearly 100 of the bodies brought here yesterday by the tender Lady Grey have thus far been recognized by sorrowing friends and relatives. This is in addition to the eighteen bodies identified and claimed at Rimouski.

Some of the identifications include persons of prominence who lost their lives in the collision between the Empress and the Storstad early Friday. They are Sir Henry Seton-Karr, the big game hunter; Dr. E. A. Barlow, a leading geologist of Canada, and Mrs. W. Leonard Palmer, wife of a London newspaper man. Nearly a score of members of the Salvation Army have been identified among the dead. The funeral ship Lady Grey escorted by the British steamer Essex arrived in Quebec early Sunday morning and soon thereafter bluejackets carried the bodies ashore. The pier shed was heavily draped in black and over the windows sheets were fastened to shut out the curious and the morbid.

On the wharf, as the ship docked, a number of officials, newspaper men and photographers were gathered. Among the disappointed ones when the people were admitted to view the bodies in the funeral shed was H. Lurton, a Norwegian. He and his wife were on a visit to their old home. His wife was torn from his grasp when the Empress of Ireland went down and they searched for her a long time as he swam near the wreck, but he could not find her. He was saved, but this is a matter of regret to him, now that his wife is dead.

Little White Caskets.

A section in the shed that caused deep sorrow to those who visited it was that in which twenty-five little white caskets lay. These contained the bodies of babies and little children. Person, after person turned away crying from this sad collection.

Several bodies of the dead were badly gashed, probably killed in their berths by the force of the Storstad's bow as it crushed into the Empress of Ireland's side, while nearly all were bruised and battered from contact with debris. Additional bodies are being recovered, but slowly, at the scene of the disaster, reports from Rimouski and Matane say. A force of men is patrolling both sides of the river, but so far with little success. Boats are hovering over the river with the same purpose in view.

SEARCH FOR THE DEAD.

Tugs and Launches at Spot Where Empress of Ireland Sank.

Rimouski, June 1.—Several tugs and launches chartered by the Canadian Pacific Railway company today began a systematic search of the St. Lawrence river in an effort to recover more of the Empress of Ireland's dead.

One or more launches remained directly over the spot where the shattered hull lies three miles off shore waiting for the bodies of some of the victims to come to the surface of the water. Two of the lost liner's life boats were found floating down stream today. They were empty.

HE WAS HEADING NEW REVOLUTION

Gen. Bliss Reports Arrest of Quevado and His Followers.

GERMAN SHIPS FINED

Washington, June 1.—Brigadier General Bliss reported to the war department today the arrest of Quevado and his followers at El Paso yesterday. It is understood that Quevado was heading a new counter revolution in Chihuahua. He will be sent to Fort Wingate, N. M., with other Mexican refugees. Quevado was in the Huerta army which surrendered at Presidio, Texas, but escaped at the time.

The Brazilian minister in Mexico City informed the state department today that Gregario Alcaraz, servant of Captain Rush of the battleship Florida, who went through the Mexican lines, now is being held in the military prison in Mexico City. The minister is seeking his release. At the instance of the Brazilian minister the Huerta government is investigating a report that William Sims an American, was executed at Salina Cruz, May 16.

Secretary Garrison made an official staatement today of the status of the cases of the German ships Ypiranga and Bavaria, which landed munitions of war for Huerta at Puerto Mexico and were fined more than one million pesos by American officials at Vera Cruz. Gen. Funston reported that the ship's agents had arranged bonds. The secretary's statement follows:

"The customs and port officials fined the Hamburg-American liner Bavaria 118,685 pesos for having discharged a large portion of her cargo, consigned to Vera Cruz, at another port before arriving at the port of Vera Cruz, and for correcting her manifest after arrival in the port of Vera Cruz.

"A similar fine has been imposed upon the Ypiranga, amounting to 894,950 pesos for failure to correct invoices accordingly, and discharging her cargo at a port other than that to which consigned. Gen. Funston states that the officers in question had no option under the Mexican law and had to assess the fines in the sums named. No appeal has been taken on behalf of the vessels and the presumption is that if nay further proceedings are to be had representations will be made to our state department."

Concerning sanitary conditions at Veera Cruz Secretary Garrison today said: "The United States army has completed one month's occupation of Vera Cruz. There have been ashore more than 7,000 soldiers and marines and not one death from disease has occurred within that period."

SEEKS $10,000 FOR INJURIES

Cecil Roebuck Sues Fred H. Meyers, Blaming Him for Bad Lift.

NEWS OF THE COURTS

Charging that it was the fault of the defendant that an elevator on which he was riding with a load of sawdust was in bad condition and broke with its burden, causing him permanent injuries, Cecil Roebuck has commenced suit in the superior court against Fred H. Meyers for $10,000, the complaint charging negligence. The accident occurred December 19, 1913, at the livery barn operated by the defendant on Washington boulevard west. The complaint alleges that the elevator was out of condition and its cable worn and weak, facts it is charged the defendant knew. The elevator, with the plaintiff and a load of sawdust he was taking to the second floor of the stable, where he was an employe, were shot against the supporting beam and the cable parted. Roebuck fell to the first floor and received injuries to one of his legs that he alleges are permanent.

Wants a Limited Divorce.

A suit for separation from bed and board and $2,000 alimony has been filed in the superior court by Belle Eggimann against Peter Eggimann. She alleges they were married in August, 1887, and separated the 29th of May, 1914. They have four children, one 26, one 19 and two 14 years of age. Of the minor children the wife asks custody. She charges failure to provide and habitual cruelty, stating that the defendant will go for weeks without speaking to her, showing her any affection or displaying and anxiety to promote her happiness, and that while her husband is employed at a salary of $80 to $90 a month as a chief clerk for the Nickel Plate railroad, she has been compelled to go out and work at cleaning offices to get money to clothe herself. He refuses her the privileges of recreation, she says, will go no place with her and furnishes no money for any purpose except to supply the table, and that grudgingly, denying her money to clothe the children. A home valued at $2,500 and owned jointly, she says, was purchased mainly with money to which she fell heir. She wants a limited separation and $2,000 allowance.

READY FOR TRIAL TEST.

Two Cup Class Yachts to Show Sailing Abilities Tomorrow.

New York, June 1.—Two of the three cup class yachts, Resolute and Vanitie, were ready for the first trial contest tomorrow for the long series of races which will terminate in August by the selection of a defender for the Americas cup. The third yacht, Diance, will not be prepared to meet her rivals until the last of the week, perhaps not until June 12, owing to radical alterations which are being made in her tops.

The first race tomorrow will be in the usually placid waters of upper Long Island Sound, with a start off Great Captains Island. The thirty-mile course will probably give the yachts a chance to show their abilities in all points of sailing.

Uncertainty as to County's Legal Position Holds Up Board.

THE MUNICIPAL NEWS

On advice of City Attorney Colerick the board of works Monday again postponed the awarding of the contract for the construction of the retaining wall on Spy Run avenue north of the State street bridge to the Centlivre brewery. Uncertainity as to the legal position of Allen county, which has appropriated $5,000 for its part of the work, has constrained the postponement. It may yet be necessary for the county to advertise for bids for the construction of its part of the work. The city attorney and County Attorney Hoffman are examining the law.

A gang of men will be put to work excavating at the place of the cave-in Tuesday morning. It will be a big and dangerous task for it will be necessary to go down some thirty-five or forty feet to get to the seat of the trouble.

SIMMS SEES SAFE SENATE MAJORITY

Repeal of Canal Tolls Exemption Will Have 52 Votes, He Says.

LABOR GROUP ACTIVE

Washington, June 1.—After a conference today between leaders of the fight to pass the Panama tolls exemption bill, Senator Simms predicted that the measure would get the votes of fifty-two senators, a safe majority. Senator Simmons declared his line up did not include any senator considered doubtful. So far no attempt has been made to sound out sentiment on various amendments or to discover if an arbitration resolution can pass.

Voting on Amendments.

Today was counted on as a field day for labor in the house. With a continuation of the consideration of the Clayton omnimus anti-trust bill and an order to immediately begin voting upon the amendments which the labor unions want tacked onto the bill, the American Federation of Labor officials were watching with great interest what the house would do. Representatives Kitchin, North Carolina; Henry, of Texas, chairman of the rules committee; Keating, of Colorado; Buchanan, of Illinois, and others of the so-called labor group in the house, were ready to fight for the labor amendments, if necessary, although counting upon easy adoption of them.

Representative Webb presented the first committee amendment, providing that no labor or farmers' organization should be held to be a combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade, which, after ten hours' discussion, was adopted. On a rising vote, 207 members, all that were present, voted to write the amendment into the bill.

Delays the Resolution.

By a vote of 33 to 20 the senate today referred to the interstate commerce committee the Norris resolution asking the attorney general to state if the New York Central lines constitute a combination in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law and if he intends to proceed against it.

The order sending the resolution to the interstate commerce committee is to delay the resolution.

Other senators, some of the democrats, objected to calling up the attorney general to disclose his intentions in a matter which might later be the subject of litigation.

"WHERE FORT WAYNE GETS HER GLASSES"

FREE RIDES FASHIONABLE IN TOLEDO'S NOVEL STREET CAR WAR.

BY JUDSON KING.
(Secretary of National Popular Government League)

Toledo, O., June 1.—The Toledo street car company, with its franchises expired, flatly refuses to obey a 3-cent ordinance and is carrying passengers free—unless they voluntarily pay 5 cents.

Outstripping in spectacular features either that of Cleveland or Detroit, the street-car war begun 15 years ago by the famous mayor, "Golden Rule" Jones, is rapidly nearing a climax which will make history.

Mayor Carl F. Keller and the city council, standing pat on their platform and written personal pledges, demand a 3-cent fare. The company declares a 3-cent fare impossible, but agrees, under certain conditions, to try the scheme for a year.

About two-thirds of the people, just to show they are too good sports to hit even a down-and-out street car company, pay the nickel with a grin.

But don't imagine they are being horns-swaggled. They know the company is well aware its chances for a franchise would go glimmering if it dare throw them off the cars—municipal ownership would come in a hurry.

Henry L. Doherty & Co., of Wall street, New York, recently took over the company—the "Big Con"—after it had repeatedly failed to land a franchise. Henry L., in his own genial, proper person, is one of the most astute and able public-utility promoters in the United States. His companies own properties in 176 cities. He claims never to have been whipped in a franchise fight and is personally on the job in Toledo.

Clearly Henry is up against the fight of his life. He is in the ring with the people who have for eight successive elections licked a powerful street-car corporation managed by one of the smoothest politicians Ohio ever produced—Walter Brown.

On the other hand, with a property stocked and bonded to $31,609,000 on a $7,000,000 physical valuation, he can't grant 3-cent fares and pay dividends to his stockholders. Besides, a 3-cent franchise would be bad precedent, other cities would demand it. To allow municipal ownership would be worse still. All street-car magnates are praying for Henry.

Doherty believes in private ownership. He told me the post-office should be run by a private corporation, and even the public roads. The public schools he would retain as a part of the public power of the state.

He affects, however, to belong to a "new school" public-utility men, who are square with the public. He ignores "politicians"—at least the Toledo kind—and plays to the people. He mixes, addresses meetings, buys space in the papers to instruct them and invites criticism.

He admits it is a hard job to deal with folks educated by "Golden Rule" Jones and Tom Johnson. To all arguments they reply—3-cent fares! If he says it is impossible they tell him to "squeeze out the water" and it will be. If he mentions "innocent purchasers" they decline to be responsible and remind him that several thousand "widows and orphans" in Toledo are interested in 3-cent fares.

A RUSH FOR FREE RIDES IN TOLEDO AND THE MEN LEADING THE TRACTION WAR. HENRY L. DOHERTY OF WALL STREET, PRINCIPAL IN 176 PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATION (BELOW) AND CARL F. KELLER MAYOR OF TOLEDO (ABOVE).

Eichhorn has entered judgment in favor of Mayor Joseph E. Bell, of Indianapolis, in his suit against James I. Hogston, seeking collection of an attorney's fee for $20,000, alleged won for representing Hogston in a suit to set aside a will. The judgment was awarded on the jury's verdict, allowing the full amount of $20,000 with interest from July 3, 1913, and amounted to $1,176.66.

Brown township is holding second place with 16, and several more are expected to enter the race. Emerald township has 13 entries. Last year but 78 boys were enrolled.

Antwerp will not have any Chautauqua this year, but during this interim will do a little $43,000 stunt of street paving. At least, the advertisements are out announcing this new feature on the amusement platform here. It will be staged without music—unless quite slow and sorrowful.

ELECTRICITY IN PRANKS.

Decatur, Ind., June 1.—Miss Annetta Moses, city librarian, and her mother, Mrs. Julia Moses, narrowly escaped serious injury when lightning struck the city library, where the two ladies were housed during the storm. It just missed them by a narrow margin, but stunned them badly and for a time they were unable to realize their narrow escape. WIFE'S RIGHT TO NAME BABY.

Judge Rules That the Husband Has Nothing to Do With It.

Los Angeles, June 1.—Judge Charles Monroe, in superior court, has rendered a decision that a wife has absolute authority in the naming of children. The husband has nothing to do with it.

The ruling was made in the case of Chyrstoe Malamatinos, a Greek, who insisted that his baby daughter be named for Helen of Troy.

His wife, an American, insisted on Muriel, and the court sustained her choice and ordered Malamatinos to pay the family $5 a week.

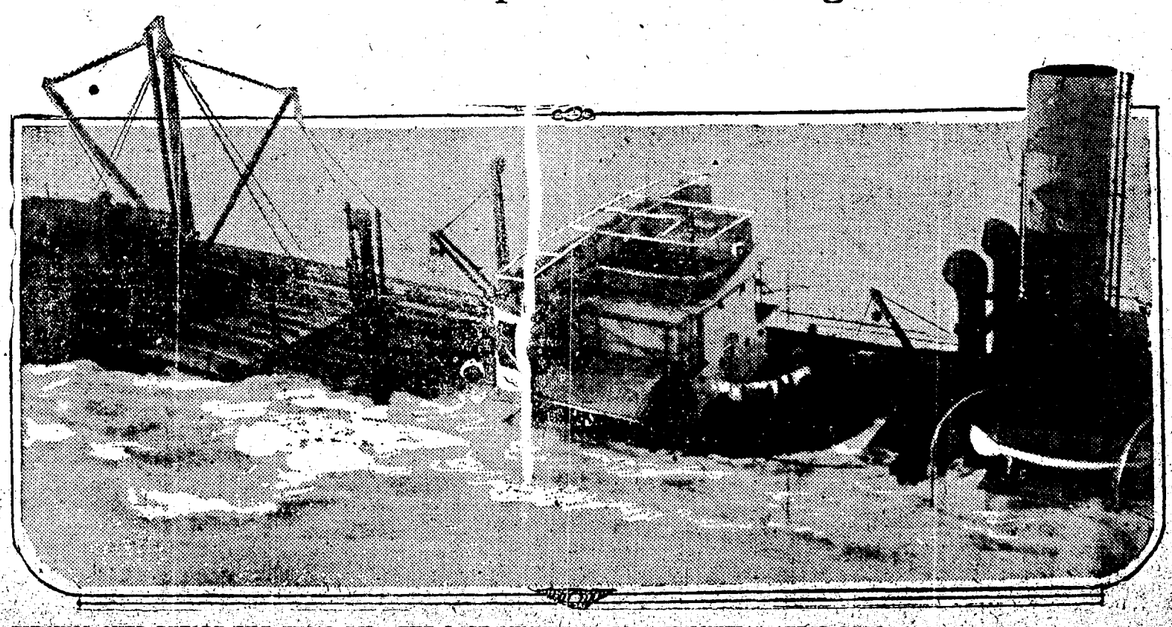
When Another Liner Went Down Like Empress of Ireland and Near the Same Spot Two Years Ago



TURNING OVER BEFORE THE FINAL DIP. THE LAST MINUTE OF THE "HELVETIA" AFTER BEING STRUCK IN A FOG BANK ON JULY 27, 1912, NEAR FATHER POINT, BY THE "EMPRESS OF BRITAIN."

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

Acts 5:1-16.

1 But a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession,

2 And kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

3 But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land?

4 Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.

5 And Ananias hearing these words fell down, and gave up the ghost and great fear came on all them that heard these things.

6 And the young men arose, wound him up, and carried him out, and buried him.

7 And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in

8 And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much.

9 Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out.

10 Then fell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost: and the young men came in, and found her dead, and, carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

11 And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things.

12 And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; (and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch.

13 And of the rest durst no man join himself to them: but the people magnified them.

14 And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women.)

15 Insomuch that they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them.

16 There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed every one.

MONDAY, JUNE 1, 1914.

Growth of a Great Industry

Government reports show there has been a remarkable increase in the production of cement in this country since 1895. In that year fewer than 1,000,000 barrels were produced, while last year, 1913, the grand total was 92,400,000 barrels. Scarcely a building of any sort is today erected without the use of cement, and while a tremendous increase in the use of the product has been fully realized, the figures above are likely to be staggering. It is interesting to note, also, that Indiana is playing a very large part in furnishing the tremendous supply now utilized.

There are so many uses for cement today that it is practically impossible to list them. The popularity of cement as a building material continues to increase, and for certain paving purposes, because of its cheapness and durability ,it promises to remain unrivaled. Cement today enters into the manufacture of everything from buildings and bridges to telegraph poles and sewer pipes, and has come to be recognized as the most sanitary and lasting material that can be manufactured at a reasonble price. Notwithstanding the rapid increase in the demand for cement, as its uses have multiplied, this is one material which has played no part in the high cost of living problem. As a matter of fact, the consumer today is paying approximately one-half the price per barrel paid in 1895. The quality of the product, nevertheless, is better than ever before.

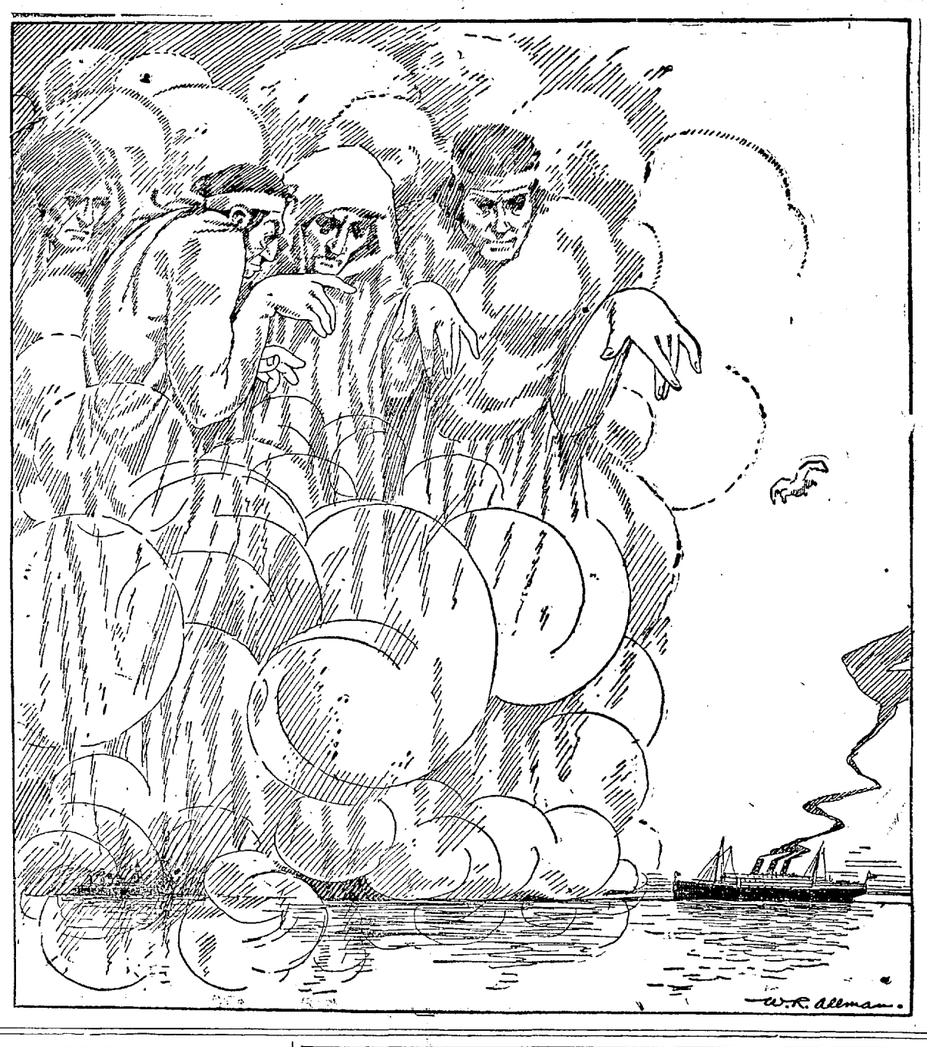
Engineers have developed the use of cement to a point where it is now possible to erect a practically indestructible skyscraper of this material, and cement buildings are going up in large cities in all parts of the country. Brick and stone pavements are rapidly being displaced by those of cement, because the latter pavement is sanitary, cheaper and more durable. Experiments are being made in various sections of the country in the construction of cement roads, and on the farm hundreds of uses have been found. The cements used by the governments in its numerous operations ,including the construction of the Panama canal and the large irrigation dams built by the United States reclamation service in the west, are all tested carefully by the United States bureau of standards.

Before leaving for Spain to attend the wedding of his son, Colonel Roosevelt issued a statement in which he declared that in neither the tariff bill nor the new currency law has the democratic administration competently responded to governmental needs of the country, and speaking generally, things are all out of joint. Somehow we had an impression that the Wilson administration is one of the things with which the strenuous colonel would refrain from declaring himself dee-lighted.

White slavers who attempt to ply their nefarious vocation in Indiana may possibly draw an impressive lesson from the experience of Harry Kimble, before Judge Anderson in the federal court at Indianapolis. Kimble admitted his guilt, and five years in the federal prison at Stillwater, Minn., is the penalty he will pay for his transgression of the law.

President Wilson sent from the White House conservatories a bouquet of flowers for the tomb of General Lawton on Decoration day. The government has not yet seen fit to erect a monument at the grave of the Indiana hero—a neglect that seems shameful when one recalls General Lawton's conspicuous services for his country.

INTO THE FOG.



PRESS ON IRISH HOME RULE BILL.

"King Will Sign."

Baltimore American—"The passing of the Home bill the third time places it beyond the power of repeal by the upper house. The king will sign it despite adverse action by the peers, should this be forthcoming."

"Prejudices."

St. Louis Republic—"There is little sense in denying that religious beliefs and prejudices enter into the Ulster crisis, and if the seemingly inevitable clash comes the bitterness of religious war will be mingled with the civil strife."

"The Leading Issue."

Pittsburg Dispatch—"Thus is terminated a fight begun by the home rule members forty years ago and adopted by Gladstone twenty-nine years ago. Since the defeat of Gladstone's home rule bill in 1886 it has really been the leading issue in English politics."

"Will Not Rejoice."

Birmingham Age-Herald—"A brave and liberty loving, but oppressed, people have come to their own, and liberty loving people through at the world will now rejoice with the sons of Erin."

"The Situation."

Pittsburg Post—"Ulster threatens revolt and the imperial authorities say constitutional government must be upheld at all costs. Such is the situation as seen from a distance."

"An Amending Bill."

Utica Press—"With the passage of home rule the government now is to take up an amending bill in the hope that in some degree, at least, it may placate the threatening opposition in Ulster to the operation of the home rule law in that province."

"Way to Compromise."

Philadelphia Bulletin—"As to the future of Irish home rule in its domestic surroundings, friendly sentiment can hope that the way to compromise between the factional and sectional elements will be found."

"Fight Long."

Rochester Democrat and Chronicle—"Ireland's victory in the fight for home rule must please all true Irishmen, for the fight has been long, always hard and at times bloody."

MISSOURI JUSTICE.

(Pittsburg Dispatch.)

Once more the Missouri courts have declared their unshaken determination to uphold the letter of the law, even if commonsense and justice totter. The fomous comma case and the controversy over the precise legal distinction between shooting a man in the head or the body were former examples, but neither eclipsed the latest ruling at Macon. A St. Louis man convicted of picking a conductor's pocket at Moberly and whose punishment was fixed by the jury at two years in the penitentiary has been granted a new trial because of a wrong word in an instruction. The instruction defined larceny as the wrongful or fraudulent stealing, taking or carrying away. The court held that the conjunction "and" should have been used instead of "or." The accused had been tried three times.

It would be interesting to know if the court really believed the use of "and" instead of "or" in that definition would have had the slightest effect on the jury's verdict. It may be interesting to the legal pundits to worry over the exact difference which the use of the words makes or implies in that connection, but to the lay mind it seems profitless discussion. The real error, to the non-professional mind, in this instance would seem to be the complicating and confusing legal terminology which caused the judicial slip, and which is so characteristic of legal phraseology in courts and documents.

When the case reaches the Missouri supreme court, which it probably will, that learned body may elucidate the puzzling point whether a jury that believed a man guilty of wrongful or fraudulent stealing, taking or carrying away could have any reasonable doubt as to his equal guilt of wrongful and fraudulent stealing, taking and carrying away.

Laurier Urges Probe Into Ship Disaster

Sir Wilfred Laurier

Sir William Laurier, former premier of Canada, and now leader of the opposition in the Dominion's parliament, brings to attention the fact that the sinking of the "Empress of Ireland" is the third catastrophe of its kind on the St. Lawrence route since navigation opened two months ago. He demands immediate investigation, with a view of obtaining more stringent maritime regulations.

USES BEE STING FOR RHEUMATISM

California Man Found a Remedy Drastic But Efficacious.

LAUDS THE BEE STING

Long Beach, Cal., June 1.—Wm. Frank is now entirely free from rheumatism he contracted while fighting for the United States in the Philippines in the Spanish-American war. Frank resorted to the bee-sting cure. He was attacked by a swarm of bees that numbered at least 1,000.

WILLIAM FRANK.

Frank was very low for a time as a result of the stings. He was unconscious for hours, and Dr. W. H. Smith, of the Long Beach sanatorium worked over him for an hour and a half before he brought him out of danger. When Frank recovered he and Mrs. Frank picked out eighty-five stings that the bees had left in his hands and legs.

A week or so after his recovery, Frank realized that he was no longer bothered by rheumatic pains.

If his rheumatism ever returns, Frank states he will again resort to the bee cure, although he will not take such a severe treatment as before.

"Fifteen or twenty bee stings," says Frank, "will cure the severest form of rheumatism."

Frank is now able to lift his legs up in front of him. throw his arms about in any direction and indulge in any kind of muscular effort—something he could not do before he took the bee cure.

It has also been decided to hold the celebration on the large campus north of the college buildings. In case of rain, the crowds will be housed in the gymnasium, the college buildings and auditorium and in Concordia Lutheran church on Allgeier street. The next meeting of the board will be held Wednesday night at which time sub-committees are to be appointed.

FRED LEWIS WILL RECOVER.

Motorcyclist Struck by Interurban Car Shows Improvement.

Attendants at the hospital states that the condition of Fred Clarence Lewis, the young man who had his right leg amputated above the ankle following an accident Sunday afternoon at 12:40 o'clock when a Bluffton interurban struck him, is somewhat improved and that there is hope for his recovery.

Lewis, who is 22 years of age, and is employed at the Fort Wayne Electric works, was coming to Fort Wayne on his motorcycle following a visit to his home in Arcola. When he reached a point six miles south of the city on the Bluffton road, it is supposed that his engine went wrong and he could not control it.

The unfortunate youth drove his motorcycle onto the crossing and the insterurban which, according to witnesses, had given the usual signs for a crossing, crashed into him, throwing him to the side of the road, where he was picked up in an unconscious condition and removed to the St. Joseph hospital, where it was found necessary to remove the foot. Dr. James M. Dinnen performed the operation.

The car which struck the injured youth was in charge of Motorman VanDine and Conductor Hunt. They picked up the boy and rushed him to the hospital and took the remains of the motorcycle to the interurban traction terminal.

IS SLOWLY IMPROVING.

Samuel Hart, who underwent an operation Sunday morning for the amputation of his left limb, is steadily improving at the St. Joe hospital. Hart is the aged man who was shot while attempting to steal some chickens from a man's roost on the evening of May 4. Blood poison set in and it was thought that there was no hope for his recovery, but since the operation he is continuing to get better.

CANADIAN SALVATION ARMY OFFICERS WHO PERISHED ON THE ILL-FATED EMPRESS OF IRELAND.

They were members of a party of 165 who left Toronto to attend the world's decennial congress of the Salvation Army, which is to be held from June 11th to June 21st. Commissioner Rees was the commanding officer of the army in Canada and Col. Maidment was field secretary. Both were accompanied by their wives. Lieut. Col. Turner, who was head of the army's property department, had just recovered from an attack of smallpox and was taking the trip for his health.

JESS FELGER IS PEACE WRECKER

Breaks Up Quiet Time that Ran Through Holiday and Sunday.

NEWS OF THE POLICE

Jess Felger, who bothers the police and the city court quite a lot, wrecked one of the quietest periods Fort Wayne has known for a good while, when he got up an early head of steam this morning and was arrested helplessly drunk and hauled in just a moment too late to get on Judge Kerr's Monday docket. It saved the docket, however, from disfigurement by a single new case. From Friday until Jess Felger's arrest the police had nothing to do in the customary line. Decoration Day Saturday and the Sunday following were distinguished by a perfect peace in Fort Wayne. Not a man was locked in a cell at police headquarters from Friday night to Monday morning.

Warrants for Saloonkeepers.

Warrants were issued this morning for Dan Clemens, proprietor of the Alt Heidelberg cafe and saloon; for H. A. Weibke, proprietor of the Hof Brau cafe and saloon, and William H. Knapp, proprietor of the Baltes hotel, cafe and saloon. The warrants were based on affidavits charging conducting a saloon contrary to law. Sunday morning about 1:30, Captain Richard Kelly and sergeant David Bloom conducted an investigation down town to ascertain if the laws were being broken. They say they found violations in progress at the bar and in the cafe at the Alt Heidelberg, in the cafe of the Hof Brau and evidence at the Baltes that there had been drinking. Captain Kelly filed affidavits and warrants were served. The cases will be heard Tuesday morning.

Lad Tells a Good Story.

Young Steve Pytel, aged 11 years, was a good witness for his father, Lawrence Pytel, charged with stealing lumber from the Pennsylvania railroad. With a cooler head, a finer intelligence and a greater readiness of resource than his parent the lad came close to explaining away the charge. It depends upon a witness who will be in court Tuesday and pending whose appearance the case was continued a day. Pytel, senior, gave bond and was released after being looked up three days. The boy has been certified to the juvenile court.

Other City Court Cases.

Walter Winter, a 17-year-old lad, paid $10 and costs for exceeding the speed limit with his motorcycle on Spy Run avenue. He was "clocked" by Motorcycle Officer Dan Kintz, who previously had warned him to slow up. Winter pleaded that the motorcycle refused to be controlled.

Walter Hans paid $5 and costs for driving his automoblie past a street car that was standing at theintersection of Calhoun and Wayne streets to receive and discharge passengers. The young man displayed engaging frankness in admitting the offense, in approving the action of Officer Major, who arrested him, in admitting his knowledge of the laws and ordinances and in aggreeing that he should be penalized. He merely claimed by privilege to state that he was not driving recklessly, that he did not commit the infraction designedly and that his engrossment in a business conversation with a companion led to the violation.

The case against Frase Fyke charged with stealing a bundle of newspapers of the value of 14 cents from a newstand, was certified to the juvenile court, the lad being but 14 years old.

The case against Melville Denny for violating a city ordinance in having obstructed an alley, was continued indefinitely, it being shown that the obstructions had been removed.

William Miller and Bernard Boehm, charged with drunkenness, were released after being held from Saturday.

DR. ADAMS PROVES ALIBI.

Dr. J. H. Adams, a widely known dentist with offices down town and a residence on Annie avenue, near Parnell avenue, appeared persona propria before Detective Sergeant Peter Junk to establish an alibi to the charge that he had been drowned in Toledo, Ohio, Saturday. Detective Junk surveyed Dr. Adams, laboring with sweaty vigor in his kitchen garden and admitted that the alibi was good. The officer had gone to the Adams home to notify Mrs. Adams of her husband's death. He didn't tell her. The police department got a message from Toledo stating that John Adams or J. K. Clark, a dentist, had been drowned there and asking that "Jack" Nickell, a cousin in this city, be notified. Dr. Adams, of Fort Wayne, is a nephew of "Jack" Nickell, and hence arose the confusion.

Women to Build Lincoln Memorial

Mrs. George P. Eustis

Chicago, June 1.—In a highway that will stretch from San Francisco to New York and extend its tree-bordered tributaries into almost every state in the Union, the women of the United States will perpetuate the memory of Abraham Lincoln. The Lincoln Highway commission will spend more than $10,000,000 on the memorial highway. Mrs. E. E. Kendall, Chicago clubwoman, has been appointed chairman of the committee that will have charge of the tree planting along the main road and its tributaries. Much of the preliminary work has been done, but the general plan will be completed when the state chairmen meet in Chicago during the biennial convention of clubwomen, June 9.

FRED STOLL DIES FROM CHLOROFROM

Domestic Differences Lead Aged Man to Commit Suicide.

WAS SECOND ATTEMPT

Fred Stoll, aged sixty-eight years, a wealthy property owner living at 121 Esmond street, made a second and successful attempt to end his own life late Saturday afternoon, when in the absence of his wife, he saturated a cloth with chloroform and placed it over his nostrils. Differences with his wife, it is said, led the aged man to suicide.

Only a few weeks ago he filed a sensational divorce suit in the Allen county courts and among other things, charged that his wife was attempting to induce him to dispose of all of his property and cash. Later he succeeded in having the suit withdrawn.

Two weeks ago Mr. Stoll attempted to commit suicide by the chloroform route, but was prevented by his wife. Mrs. Stoll left the house Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock and says her husband appeared in a cheerful disposition. She returned at 5:30 and found his lifeless body lying upon a bed. Beside him were two letters, one addressed to three sons and the other to Charles Hoffman, of South Calhoun street, a brother-in-law.

Coroner E. H. Kruse was summoned and after an examination expressed a belief that the aged man had died at least fifteen or twenty minutes after having placed the drug to his nostrils. The man's face was badly blistered by the deadly fumes.

Mr. Stoll had been employed at the Packard company's plant for two years. Surviving besides the widow he leaves three sons, George, Fred and Charles Stoll. He also leaves one brother, Jacob Stoll, of Packard avenue.

Private funeral services Tuesday afternoon from the residence. Interment at Lindenwood.

DECORATION DAY PROGRAM SUCCESS

Thousands Attned Ceremonies Held at Lindenwood Cemetery.

BIG STREET PARADE

Thousands of people gathered at Lindenwood cemetery Saturday afternoon, following a big street parade, and with song and speeches participated in the closing program of the city's annual observance of Decoration day. The program was a success in every particular and not a single accident marred the smoothly running schedule of holiday features.

Every military organization was largely represented in the parade and music was furnished by the Elks', Citizens' and Moose lodge bands, Concordia band and Jefferson drum corps. One of the best showing was made by the cadets of Concordia college, attired in dress uniform and moving under the command of Captain George Byroade.

Mayor William J. Hosey presided as chairman of the services at Lindenwood and addresses were delivered by Rev. H. C. Hadley and Rev. John R. Quinlan, while the chairman of the executive committee, Captain T. W. Blair, read Lincoln's Gettysburg address. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. D. H. Guild and music for the ceremonies was rendered by the Dudley Buck quartet.

For the first time in the history of Fort Wayne's Decoration Day observances, the civil war veterans did not walk in the parade. They were carried to the exercises in automobiles furnished by the following:

W. A. Davis, J. P. Johnson, William Beck, Paul Kinder, O. E. Schwartz, Edward BuBois, Dave Frosh, Hugh G. Keegan, E. F. Yarnelle, Sheriff A. C. Gladieux, Dr. Charles Rothschild, C. W. Fairfield, C. Raichter, J. S. Stark, W. A. Sheets, George K. Fox, Ohnhaus garage, Drage-Harris company, Randall Automobile company.

Adam Smith, 152 East Lieth street, was slightly injured and a bicycle he was riding was demolished when he accidentally collided with a machine driven by Clemens Beckner at the corner of Berry and Calhoun streets.

LAYS MANIA TO A BUMP ON HEAD

Confesses When Observed at Two Fires in an Hour.

LIKED TO SEE BLAZE

St. Louis, June 1.—Because George W. Bernard, a cooper, 3526 Indiana avenue, was one of the first and most interested spectators at two lumber yard fires, which caused a loss of nearly $20,000, he was arrested, suspected of setting the blaze. He confessed to the police of the Wyoming street station that he started both fires, and declared he had suffered from an incendiary mania for two years, since he fell upon his head from swinging rings in the United States army gymnasium at Fort Worden, Wash.

The first fire was in the yard of the James T. Addis Wrecking company, 3315-45 Salena street, and did $4,200 damage. The second, an hour later, was at the Independent Lumber company, 3628 South Broadway, and caused a loss of $15,000.

Confession He Made to Police.

Bernard is 32 years old. His confession, which was in writing, is as follows:

"I had been drinking beer, kuemmel and whisky with friends all day. About 9 p. m., while sitting in the back yard of my home, I became seized with a sudden desire to start a fire. I left the premises, unobserved, by way of the front gate and went to a frame shed in the rear of the Addis company's plant and piled dry kindling between them and struck a match and set fire to the kindling. Then I slipped out of the yard and waited in the vicinity until the fire department arrived.

Stopped to Watch Firemen.

"Then I went to the Independent Lumber company's yard, and, going into a lumber shed there, I piled up a lot of kindling wood and placed it between piles of lumber in the shed. I lighted a match and set fire to the kindling. In a short time the place was in flames. I left the lumber yard when the fire had started and remained in the vicinity and watched the fire department fight the flames.

"When drinking I have a mania to start fires, see fire and watch the fire department work. It possesses me more than anything else after I have been drinking."

RECOVERS SEAL OF OLD SCHOOL

University Authorities Find Emblem of the King's College.

LOST FOR 125 YEARS

New York, June 1.—After having been lost to the institution for more than a century and a quarter, the original seal of King's college, out of which has grown Columbia university, has been restored to the trustees and will be exhibited on commencement day at the university in June.

Many years of search by succeeding boards of trustees and individuals interested in preserving relics of the founding of the institution failed to reveal any trace of the original seal. Several weeks ago, however, trustees of Columbia learned that since 1809 it had been in the family of George H. Parke, of Williamsport, Pa., from whom it was purchased. It was delivered to the university officers at the meeting of the trustees. It will be the center of attraction among the many historical items that link the present institution with its parent.

Only a part of the mystery regarding the manner in which the seal disappeared has been cleared. Mr. Parke explained that it had been given to him by his grandfather, dead for many years, who said he bought it in 1809 from a man who said he had been employed by the trustees of the college to engrave a new seal.

Examination of the college records showed that in 1788, immediately after the transfer of the control of the college from the regents of the university to the trustees of Columbia college, it was ordered by the trustees that a new seal be engraved by Peter Maverick, a well known engraver of that time. The new seal was to be virtually a duplicate of the older one, the only important difference being in the inscribed name of the college.

The records show also that the new seal was delivered, but there is no record of the return of the original seal. Further examination showed that Mr. Maverick was alive in 1809.

The original seal was given to the college in 1756 by George Harrison, who was deeply interested in the institution. He was vetryman of Trinity church from 1752 to 1765.

TO BUILT SECOND OVER SEA CRAFT

Rodman Wanamaker Orders Another Machine for Ocean Flight

FROM GLENN CURTISS

New York, June 1.—Rodman Wanamaker has decided to build a second aeroplane for transatlantic flight, it was announced by the constructor, Glenn H. Curtiss. New ideas as to the lines of the craft that will compete against the best that Europe can produce for the distinction of being the first to fly across the ocean will be used in the second aeroplane, on which work is already in progress at Hammondsport, N. Y.

Mr. Curtiss, who was in the city to confer with Mr. Wanamaker on the construction of the new machine, said that the work on the first flyers had been suspended, and that the second aeroplane would be first completed. It is quite possible that both will be tried, in an effort to obtain the most efficient for the attempt.

Lieutenant John C. Porte, formerly of the British navy, who is to be the aviator in the voyage from New Foundland to Ireland, it was explained, is responsible for numerous new features which are being introduced in the second machine. Just what is the nature of the changes that have been made in the design the constructor was not ready to state yesterday. He said, however, that there would be no change in the motive power, and that one of the new Curtiss engines of 200-horse power will be used to drive the new machine. Lieutenant Porte remains at Hammondsport watching the work of building the aircraft.

Women Must Not Be Parasites, Says This Social Leader

Washington, June 1.—"The age of the woman parasite has passed. No matter how wealthy a woman's husband may be, she should have some money-earning accomplishment."

This is the gospel of independence Mrs. George P. Eustis has been preaching recently, and she has won a great many converts to her faith. Mrs. Eustis herself is a gifted musician and she has acquired a professional skill as a pianist. She could easily earn a living on the concert stage.

AMERICAN WOMEN WHO ARE WIVES OF THE GREAT

Frankly, friendly, open-hearted Mrs. Underwood has two great hobbies of which she is very proud.

The first is her husband, Oscar W. Underwood. The second is politics.

Mrs. Underwood is as familiar with the tariff as many women are with the new fashions. And she is fond of her husband's work in congress as he is, it is said.

Mrs. Underwood is a southern woman and has all the charms of the southerner. She is very accomplished, much traveled and well read.

She has spent every congressional season in Washington since her marriage, nine years ago. And she is perfectly resigned to stay in the heat of Washington all summer if there is an extra session of congress which requires her husband's presence.

"Since her earliest girlhood," Mrs. Underwood avows, "I have had a craze for politics. I confess to this reluctantly, perhaps because down south we are so conservative with regard to women in politics.

"I think men and women rarely accept a woman in good faith when she declares the consuming interest of her life is national politics.

"She gets the credit for either being silly or affected, and almost never for the ability to really comprehend national issues."

Mrs. Underwood doesn't think the majority of women have a clear grasp of politics. But she thinks this is because many of them dislike the subject and don't care to bore themselves to consider any of its phases.

"You won't find me saying that women can't understand fully anything they choose to understand. But when it comes to this matter of politics the majority of them are simply indifferent," she concludes.

As to clothes Mrs. Underwood is extremely quiet. She dresses in very simple style, but it is the simplicity which only the smartest of modistes can achieve.

She is not a suffragct. She doesn't even belong to a woman's club. And when it comes to old fashioned ideas about large families she just smiles and speaks the name of Mme. Schumann-Heink. Her admiration for the great diva who has eight children, as well as a great career, is unbounded.

In Filmy Crepe the June Bride Will be Decked on the Day of All Days.

(By Maybelle Mortimer.)

June, the month of brides and roses, is looked forward to by thousands of girls who just now are sewing into their trousseaus all the dreams of future happiness that come to the girl about to be married.

The bridal robe this year is made of white crepe, taffeta or charmeuse, and about the hips, reaching to the knees, is a frill of princess lace. Over this is a turned-under ruffle of the silk material which is put on at the belt with an upstanding ruffle. The upper part of the waist is made of princess lace.

The June bride this June will carry a prayer book with a marker of ribbon and flowers. The bridesmaid's gown is of pink taffeta made with a narrow pleating about the skirt. The tunic is very full and hangs straight and long on one side with a bias short effect on the other. The sash is of pink taffeta with a wreath of small pink roses through the center.

A white chip hat with pink roses and black velvet ribbons, a cane and a large bunch of La France roses, pink slippers and stockings, make the pretty girl who will wear them look like rosy dawn.

The groom, who usually holds about the same relative position at the ceremony that he does in the illustration, is correctly garbed in striped gray trousers, black cutaway coat, light waistcoat and dark tie.

The "mousme" sash, with its long, graceful, floating ends and its huge bow rising high in the back, is seen on the frocks of the plainest materials.

Young Boy Has Talent

MELVIN HONECK.

Master Melvin Honeck, thirteen years old, and son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Honeck, of Cottage avenue, gave a piano recital in Flick's hall on Saturday evening that was heard by many friends and acquaintances who gave the young performer much encouragement and praise. Master Honeck is a talented boy and has worked hard to accomplish many things generally not done at so youthful an age. He played very well, entirely from memory, and some numbers quite difficult, in a way that deserved much commendation both from his teaching and for his ability and natural taste. Miss Esther Ohneck sang a group of songs as a part of the pleasing program. Both performers are pupils of Miss Herrick.

AT THE EMPRESS

When a man and woman have been married, have "little tots," and then through some treacherous acts of outsiders are parted through jealousy on the part of the man there is always a warm feeling on the part of mankind for the mother when the father is given the children and they are snatched from the loving arms of the one who brought them into the world. This is a part of the story told in "The Fatal Wedding," which will be shown tonight at the Empress theater for the last time tonight.

"The Outlaw's Reform," another truly human and interesting western comedy, will start tomorrow afternoon. This film has been highly spoken of everywhere it has been shown.

Fort Wayne people are appreciating the success of the Empress in showing high first run features and are filling the house each afternoon and evening. They are also appreciating the "coolest spot in town."

KITCHEN KINKS.

When threading a needle take a white envelope, stick the needle through and draw it down until the eye is visible, and you will thread the needle like magic. The white surface of the paper sets the eye into relief as if it were magnified. A stout paper or envelope is the best, as it holds the needle more securely.

Where screws are driven into soft wood and subjected to considerable strain, they are very likely to work loose, and it is often very difficult to make them hold. In such cases the use of glue is profitable. Make the glue thick; immerse a stick about half the size of the screw, and put it into the hole; then put in the screw and drive it home as quickly as possible.

BICYCLE AND AUTOMOBILE COLLIDE

An automobile belonging to a contractor and a bicycle ridden by Lewis Weidelman, of 472 Wiebke street, crashed together Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the corner of Lafayette and East Creighton avenue. The rider of the bicycle was thrown to the pavement and received a deep gash above the right eye. Dr. Ray, who lives nearby, took the injured youth into his office where he attended him.

General Manager S. W. Greenland of the Fort Wayne & Northern Indiana Traction company, left Monday morning for Philadelphia on business. He will be absent from the city for several days.

MRS. ELLIS PROPOSES A MARRIAGE NOVITIATE.

(By Nixola Greeley-Smith)

Mrs. Havelock Ellis, one of the foremosts fenminists of the world, has just arrived in the United States to deliver a series or lectures on the woman movement which will take her ultimately through the south and west.

Mrs. Ellis, author of "Kits-Woman," "Three Modern Seers" and "The Imperishable Wing," is very incidentally the wife of the famous investigator of "The Psychology of Sex." She has been married to Havelock Ellis for twenty-three years and the union of these celebrated persons is regarded by those who know them as the strongest possible argument for the permanence of romantic love.

An interesting detail of their domestic life is that Mrs. Ellis has a cottage of her own in Cornwall while Mr. Ellis maintains a flat for himself in London, so that the most of the devoted married couple on earth do not really live together in the sense that most married persons do.

"There are weeks when do not see each other," Mrs. Ellis confided to me. "I cannot imagine that two persons can live together 365 days of the year for a lifetime without becoming horribly bored. If I had never separated from my husband I feel sure that I could not have written the romantic love letter, really a wild letter, that I sent him this morning just before you came."

Mrs. Ellis told me her age with a dauntlessness that is perhaps her most distinguished characteristic. Blunt eyes that have kept their merriment for half a century, a fine valor which has braved the embattled prudes of the world and fought its hypocrites single handed, short, rough, snow-dusted chestnut hair that waves away from a Byronic brow, a kindling smile, an erect carriage—such is England's foremost feminist.

"What do you consider the most important demand of the woman movement?" I asked her.

"The economic independence of women," she replied. "Until love is freed from the obligation of support no man can know that he is loved for himself, no woman can be sure of the disinterestedness of her affection. I believe, of course, that every man should support his child up to the age of 21.

"But love must be freed from commercialism. And in order to do this we shall have to try many experiments. One of the experiments I propose I call anovitiate of marriage. I don't use the expression novitiate as equivalent to trial marriage. If two people were to inhabit the same house, the man living with the girl's family for one year, it would be impossible to conceal small habits, peculiarities and moods which sometimes play great havoc with marriage as a vice itself. Such an experiment, a novitiate for marriage, would tend to diminish the evil effects of the sex-spell, the magnetic attraction between a man and a woman which hypnotizes their reason."

FRUIT PROSPECTS GOOD.

Large Yield of All Crops, Except Peaches, Is Expected.

Washington, June 1.—General prospects for a large yield of fruit of all kinds, with the possible exception of peaches, have not been equaled at any time within the last decade, except in 1911, according to the report of the United States chamber of commerce's committee on statistics and standards on condition of fruits on May 20 last. The report deals with all fruits of commercial importance, including apples, peaches, pears, plums and prunes, grapes, oranges, lemons, grapefruit, strawberries, cherries and others. The committee reports that more or less damage has occurred in nearly all regions to fruits, but that except in the case of peaches, it is not a matter of much moment.

N.Y. THEATRICAL LETTER By NORMAN

RALPH HERZ AND OCTAVIA BROSKE IN "MADAME MOSELLE."

New York, June 1.—It took a new producing firm to hop right into the season's first hot spell with a musical-comedy venture.

With theater doors closing to the right of them, and to the left, two daring individuals, named Chase and Everall, rode into the Shubert with "Madame Moselle."

The name of this production is reminiscent of "Madame Sherry," it will be noted; but, whereas "Madame Sherry" was a great success, "Madame Moselle"—well—she's another vintage entirely.

With a little fixing up in the way of added ginger, and the acquisition of one or two "whistly" songs, she may yet gather the coin; but just at the present the utmost efforts of Ralph Herz, Octavia Broske, Diane Aubrey, Jack Henderson, Ernest Lambart, William Pruette, and some other really capable people fail to make the Madame sparkle as Moselle ought to sparkle.

This is the time of the year to learn what have been the really big successes of the year. Only the fittest survive the middle of May.

There is no possible doubt as to what the great money-makers of the past season have been—and still are—"Potash & Perlmutter" and "Seven Keys to Baldpate" have played to packed houses ever since they opened, early last fall, and promise to run many months more.

Other profitable plays still doing business are "To Many Cooks," "A Pair of Sixes," "The Yellow Ticket," "The Things That Count," "Kitty Mackay," "Today," and "The Dummy"—eight successes, all told, out of perhaps fifty dramatic productions.

In Musical comedy, Arthur Hammerstein and Henry W. Savage are the only ones who have rung the cash register bell—the former with "High Jinks" and the latter with "Sari." There is no other survivor out of perhaps a score of productions.

Gen. Funston's Great Story, "Memories of Two Wars"

The Marvelous Bravery of Janny and Rodolfo at Guaimaro.

(In the foregoing chapter Gen. Funston told of the junction of the rebel forces of General Gomez and General Garcia, making a total of 3,000 men and adding two pieces of artillery. Then they marched on the town of Guaimaro defended by a strong force of Spanish also with artillery. We left it for this chapter to tell the story of that famous siege.—Editor.)

CHAPTER VI.

By GEN. FREDERICK FUNSTON, Brigadier General, United States Army.

It had been determined to use but one gun in the attack on the Gonfu blockhouse, and this was the twelve-pounder that belonged to Garcia's command The piece was in position before daylight, with Osgood in personal command.

Gen. Funston. HARRIS & EWING

After it was fairlight we saw a flash of flame and smoke from the shrubbery behind which the gun position had been constructed, and almost simultaneously a shell struck the ground a few yards short of the blockhouse, but on the ricochet went through it without exploding.

The sixteen Spaniards in the little fort were on the lookout, ready for business, and in a few seconds came their fire, a continuous crackle, as they were using their magazine rifles at top speed.

At first they fought from the lower story of the blockhouse, but after the structure had been hit a couple of times they abandoned it, and took to the trenches outside. At Guaimaro there were not the bags of earth in front of the trenches that at Cascorra had given up something to shoot at the enemy having instead deep standing trenches. A man's head would be exposed for only the few seconds that it took him to empty his magazine.

Our people shot slowly and carefully, but did not succeed in diminishing the enemy's fire to any great extent. Pennie and I, animated by a desire to get a little closer to the fireworks, made a run over the gun and reached there just in time to see the Hitchkiss on its recoil knock a Cuban senseless. These twelve-pounders, very light guns for their heavy powder charge, were nearly as dangerous toward the rear as toward the front, despite the brake ropes, which were adjusted before every shot.

The bullets were coming in steadily, and keeping well down to the ground. Osgood had just remarked to me that he had accomplished all he could by driving the Spaniards from the blockhouse o the trenches outside, and that the infantry must do the rest, when a staff officer arrived to state that the Cubans were going to charge from the foot of the slope to our left.

Pennie and I hastened back to our old stand, and had hardly got settled down when a bugle rang out in the edge of the woods a hundred yards to our left there were a number of briskly-given commands, some faint cheering and a rattle of shots, and a company of men mostly negroes, led by Garcia's chief of staff, Colonel Menocal, began to climb the grassy slope.

Ordinaarily chiefs of staff do not lead charges, but no chances were being taken on some bungler making a mess of this job. The slope was so steep and the grass so high and dense that the attack was made at a walk, the men in single line, firing and yelling excitedly.

Pennie and I watched for a few seconds, when he said, "Me for this," and we started for the blockhouse, and at the same time saw Janney, Latrobe and one or two others cutting across from the gun position, with revolvers drawn.

The first man through the wire entanglement and into the trench was Janney, who had joined the attacking company just before it reached the summit.

The Spaniards had no waited for the Cubans, but had bolted, and were doing a marathon for the Isabella fortin, distant seven hundred yards. The victors fired on them from around the captured blockhouse, and killed one man about a hundred yards down the slope.

The mob of men about the captured position now made a fine target, and from every blockhouse, the church, the barracks and other points came a most terrific and well-sustained fire.

The summit of the hill rapidly became too hot. Colonel Menocal screened some of his men in the trenches and others behind the blockhouse, but he sent about half of them down the hill, not, however, until several of them had been hit.

Of course, something ridiculous had to happen. A chicken which the late garrison had evidently hoped to add to their next bill of fare escaped in the confusion and ran cackling around the blockhouse half a dozen times, pursued by Pennie, who finally killed it by throwing his machete at it.

In the meantime a number of us had entered the blockhouse and were exploring it. The lower story was littered with broken timbers, and a barrel of drinking water had been pierced at about its middle by a shell, but without destroying it or knocking it over. The remaining half barrel of water quenched many a thirst that day.

In the upper story we found a number of boxes of hard biscuit and some other food, and, after filling our pockets, began pitching the balance out to the men hugging the lee side of the building to escape the storm of bullets still sweeping the hill. A Spanish soldier, wounded by a shell, had fallen across one box of biscuits and had bled there so profusely that half of them were saturated, but it was no time to be fastidious.

In the meantime several officers of General Garcia's staff had reached us and called attention to the Spanish flag still floating from the pole on the blockhouse. This would never do, and it must come down; but it could not be lowered, being nailed to the staff. One of these officers, Lieut. Luis Rodolfo Miranda, said he would bring down the flag. With assistance, Miranda reached the roof and slowly and painfully began drawing himself up the pole, which was about eighteen feet high and four inches in diameter. Every Spaniard in Guaimaro could see him and, I believe, to a man tried to bring the gallant fellow down. Bullets hissed and crackled all about and beat a constant tattoo on the blockhouse. The pole above or below him was hit several times.

For a few moments that seemed endless we looked on in an agony of suspense. We begged him to give it up and wait for night, but he kept on, reached the flag, cut it loose with his pocket knife, slid down the pole with it, ran to the eaves and leaped to the ground, fifteen feet below. It would be difficult to imagine a feat more reckless and daring, and yet I have heard some of my own countrymen damn the whole Cuban people as a race of cowards!

Devine spied a magnificent saddle horse tied to a long rope in a little swale about 200 yards to our left front and about 500 yards from two of the Spanish blockhouses. The horse, being out of the line of fire, had not been hit, but was snorting with terror.

"That horse would suit my style of beauty," remarked Devine, and he started down the hill on a run. Once at the foot of the slope he was in plain sight from three blockhouses, two of them quite close, and every man in them did his best to "get" him. He reached the rope and untied it, but the terrified beast declined to follow and soon was brought down. Devine, having no use for a dead horse, started back up the hill. Osgood and I were breathlessly watching him from adjoining portholes when we saw him pitch forward into the grass.

Osgood cried out, "My God! he is hit! I am going after him!" and started down the ladder. Reaching the outside, we found that Janney was running down the hill, racing like mad. The enemy now concentrated their fire on him, as they had on Devine. Janney was a powerful man, and he half carried and half dragged the wounded man up that slope under a fire that it would see impossible a man could live through, it being especially severe after he hd got half way up and was exposed to nearly all the Spanish positions.

Several of us assisted him to lower Devine into the shelter of the trench. He was shot in the hip—a very severe wound, from which he did not recover during the war.

In our service, Janney's act would have brought him the Medal of Honor, or in the British army the Victoria cross. (Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons.)

SEASON'S FIRST CANTELOPES SELL FOR TWO DOLLARS APIECE.

BETTY CORELLA TESTING THE FIRST CANTALOUPE OF THE SEASON.

Los Angeles, June 1.—"Cantaloupes—ripe cantaloupes—two dollars each."

That was the cry heard here recently when the first shipment of the select Imperial valley's celebrated melons arrived.

The fruit is the best that has been placed on the local market in many seasons; large and juicy, right from the vines, where 4,000 acres of the reclaimed desert is dotted from one end to the other by cantaloupes.

"They are far better than last year," was the verdict of L. K. Small, traffic manager and assistant to the president of the American Fruit Distributers of Southern California.

Local hotel dealers were numerous as the melons were being tested and unpacked, and the larger majority went to them after some spirited bidding and each brought the usual $2. The entire shipment consisted of about thirty, a sort of advance advertisement for the big carload which will be sent soon.

The latest report states that at least 5,000 carloads of melons will be the output from Imperial valley before the season is over.

WAS LOOKING FOR WORK, NOT PLAY

Career of Ben Wallace, Indiana Circus Owner, is Interesting One.

PROMINENT AT PERU

(By FLOYD KING.)

Fifty years ago a red-headed, freckled-face little lad was running around in Miami county, Indiana, and he was looking for work, not for play. His circumstances forced him to work in order to support his widowed mother; fortunately he liked work, and from the first position he held in a livery stable, working for 50 cents a week, up to the present time, this lad has never taken a vacation.

At one time Ben Wallace only owned the cheap overalls and suspenders he wore. He did not inherit a dollar, has never had any pull except that of his own brain. At one time, he did not have money enough to buy feed for his pet canary bird. Today he owns one of the largest herds of elephants in the country and is operating one of the largest circus organizations in the world.

Prominent at Peru.

He is president of one of the largest banking institutions in Indiana, the Wabash Valley Trust company, at Peru. He owns one of the largest department stores in the state. He owns a theater and all sorts of land holdings in that city. But chief of Mr. Wallace's wealth is centered in land. He believes land is the safest and best place for money, and if he were young now, according to his statement, he would be a simple son of the soil. Raised on a farm he has become Indiana's greatest farmer, owning and operating 3,500 acres of land that could not be bought for less than $350 per acre.

When the gorgeous street pageant of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus passes over the streets of Fort Wayne, Tuesday, June 16, the small and poor lads of the city may find encouragement in the thought that the owner of that magnificent display was once as poor as any boy, but that by following two rules, of honesty and unfailing work, he became a mighty captain of industry, his circus interests, as large as they are, being comparatively a side issue with him.

They All Know "Ben."

Every well-posted farmer in the eastern states knows of "Ben" Wallace, of Peru, Ind., just as every little tot knows of the Hagenbeck-Wallace shows. Notwithstanding his wealth, Mr. Wallace was never too busy to extend every possible thought and care to his aged mother and never too proud to stoop and speak to the poor. Today when with his shows, he is sociable with every one of the 1,000 employes. Even many of the humble workmen he calls by the first name. He classes them among his friends, just as he does capitalists and noted persons, numbered among his acquaintances.

He shuns the limelight and never likes to be pointed out as "Mr. Wallace. Frequently people out of curiosity may step up to him and ask if he is Mr. Wallace. He is almost sure to answer, "I am the boss hostler," however, not denying that he is Mr. Wallace.

One Enough for Him.

Although this Hoosier showman could buy and own all the circuses in the world, he has never desired to own and operate but one complete organization, which never divides or splits. Early in life it was his ambition to build up "the highest class circus in the world" and since that was attained he has constantly maintained the high standard. When buying horses, he could buy cheap animals, but he insists on buying the best. When he buys a suit of clothes, this same idea is kept in mind. He prefers to have one good suit of clothes rather than two suits that aggregate the same price.

But it was when he bought outright the great Carl Hagenbeck's animal shows a master hand was displayed in the amusement world and by the genuine combination of that unequaled animal show with his own three-ring circus, the red-headed lad of Peru, Ind., became a "circus king."

A big modern circus and menagerie probably embrace more different kinds of system and discipline than any other business in which men engage for profit. It is a fact not generally known that the average number of circuses starting out each spring would foot up to the amazing total of 200. Where they go no one knows. They start out buoyantly enough, but somehow they never seem to get back. When one considers that this has been going on in America for the past 75 years, it is really remarkable that so few men have succeeded in the circus business. It seems pretty clear that a variety of genius not common is necessary to become a successful circus proprietor.

There are only three or four well-known circus enterprises today, and two of them, "Hagenbeck" and "Wallace," are among the most prominent. The combination of the Wallace circus as made several years ago with the Hagenbeck animal aggregation has developed a show different from the other circuses—the trained wild animals giving a feature both interesting and pleasing.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

BREAKS IN LUCK FOR THE LOCALS

Bratchi Bounds Ball Off of Pitcher's Knee and Wins a Game.

PUT ON A THRILLER

Did you ever watch a particulary close and exciting game of baseball and note that the break in luck generally marks the turning part and governs the result?

Freddie Bratchi got the break for Fort Wayne in the seventh inning of the opening game with Grand Rapids and it won for the home talent by a score of 8 to 1 in as neat a baseball match as was ever staged on the Varnell campus.

Take these games one after another and there is, as a rule, some little occurrence that upsets either one side or the other and renders final judgment on the outcome of the combat.

Bratchi's break came when he bounded a ball off Pitcher Paynter's knee in the seventh inning, a happening that converted what ordinarily would have been an easy out from the shortstop to first, into a two-base hit.

If the ball had gone an inch one way or the other it would have been difficult to handle as two men were out and the infield playing back. Smykal opened the inning with a single and after Diem had advanced him with a bunt, Fred Bramble shot a short single to left that Smykal raced home on. Martin hit to right but Bramble was held at second and a pass filled the bases. Holderman forced Brambie at the plate but Bratchi's bounder caromed off the pitcher's knee and rolled out of the way of the shortstop and the third baseman and before the left fielder could come in and retrieve it two runs had crossed the plate and the hitter had reached second.

Up to this inning Paynter had held Fort Wayne to a trio of singles but had pulled through in safety the only two times he was in any danger. Up to the seventh it looked like some high class pitching was going to waste on account of a lucky infield scratch made by Tydeman, and with which he opened the second inning.

Hughes followed with a single that sent his outfielder to third but he was forced at the plate. Hughes reached third and McLafferty erred on Castle's grounder and Grand Rapids' only marker was chalked up. Bramble did not get into trouble again until the seventh, when Hughes was passed with one down.

With a double play in sight on Killelea's grounder, Smykal muffed Brant's throw at second and two men were safe. Castle's grounder advanced both runners but he was nipped at first and then McLafferty staged a piece of fielding that squared him for his bobble in the second. He came across the diamond like a whirlwind after Steil's slow grounder and by a great stop and a greater throw he cut down the opposing short fielder at first.

Bramble displayed the best form he has ever shown here. The two hits in the second and a solid smash by Hughes to center in the ninth were the only hits he allowed. Eddie Justice tried to pull off his famous bunt down first base line and lost out on it. He was given a hand when he first went to the plate.

Brant made one of the sensational plays of the afternoon when he nipped Tydeman at first on a hit over second that looked good for a safe single.

Grand Rapids has a nicely balanced infield now, and while George Hughes is not the finished player at first that his predecessor was, he gets 'em, and that is all the position requires.

In addition to picking off the single that tied the score, Bramble got a couple of outs at first on nince plays in covering the bag.

DICKER FOR THE REAPERS IS OFF

Springfield Ardor Cools Off When It Comes to the Cold Cash.

TALK OF A TRANSFER

(Springfield News.)

Sol Meyer, of Indianapolis, still has a baseball club and franchise on his hands and the chances are that he will continue to be a magnate as far as local parties are concerned.

What he will do with the Reapers will depend on the action of the other club owners. He issued an ultimatum to the local public and fans that they must buy or he would transfer the club to some other city, stating that he had several offers.

Mr. Raphun, his representative, came here, put a price of $3,000 on Meyer's belongings in the local club and announced that after much persuasion Meyer had secured the consent of President Heilbroner to move the club to Youngstown if he agreed to pay the difference in mileage to the visting clubs. Mr. Raphun went farther. He informed the local stockholders that Kalamazoo, Mich., had offered Meyer a large bonus to move his team to that city.

Announcement that the club was to be moved created considerable interest and after some dickering Meyer granted an option that expired Wednesday. Then an investigation was started as to what rights local parties would acquire if the club was taken over. Announcement was made that the investigation had proven satisfactory and that there was no reason why Meyer's stock should not be purchased.

Then came the rub. The plan was to raise $8,000 by issuing additional stock. Of this sum $3,000 was to be paid Meyer and the remainder used to place the team on a good financial basis. At a meeting held $4,600 was subscribed. When parties interested started forth to collect enough money to satisfy Meyer they ran into a snag. One man, who had subscribed $500 worth of stock, declined to produce, claiming that he labored under the impression that the land on which the ball park is located was included in Meyer's offer. Another, who had subscribed $500, asked to be let off with $200.

These and other obstacles dampened the ardor of those in charge and the deal is said to be off unless a Richmond can be found. It is not thought that he will be forthcoming. For several days a report has been circulated that one man would take over the team. When told yesterday that his chance had arrived he decided that he did not want any of it.

There is a possibility that President Heilbroner will step in and take charge of the club for the league, and yet this move can hardly be made at the present time. President Heilbroner, who came here at the request of the local stockholders, stated at the meeting that Meyer had not mentioned the transferring of the club to him. Meyer has met all financial obligations to the league promptly and until this season has had a team up in the race. Until Meyer asks for a transfer of the franchise President Heilbroner will probably be powerless to act.

The league forced Annis to sell the Grand Rapids franchise to Essick and it forced Wagner to dispose of the Terre Haute club. There were reasons for these actions. Meyer, it is claimed, has never opposed a single move for the benefit of the league, and he has a clean slate.

Kalamazoo is in the South Michigan league, and there is no chance for Meyer to move the team there. If Youngstown is the destination another schedule would have to be adopted besides the paying of the mileage between Springfield and Youngstown would make it quite expensive.

The fans will patiently await developments. It seems to be Mr. Meyer's next move, according to their way of thinking.

Golfers In Base Ball May Hold Tournament After World Series.

THREE OF THE BEST GOLFERS IN BASEBALL.

(By Hugh S. Fullerton.)

John Miller, then of the Pittsburg Pirates, walked into the office of President Dreyfuss last summer and remarked, seriously:

"Barney, I'm afraid I'll have to quit baseball. It is interfering with my golf."

Dreyfuss, who is also a golf bug, was able to appreciate it.

If it needs any further proof of its fascination, it has secured that proof by winning over most of the baseball players in the big leagues. Nowadays if a crowd of ball players gets together, and some one wants to "fan" baseball, it is hard to get others interested; they want to talk of the drives they made, or the relative merits of an approaching cleek and a jigger in medium rough, or the best lengths of clubs.

Indeed, right now plans are under way to have a golf tournament immediately following the world's series next fall, the competitors to be major league ball players, and more than two dozen applications are filed. The tournament will be played in one of the cities in which the world's series is staged.

Almost all Connie Mack's Athletics play the game, and some of them play it exceedingly well. Chief Albert Bender is conceded to be the best of them all.

CONNIE MACK IS UNDER A STRAIN

Athletic Manager is Not Cool and Collected in Games.

EDDIE COLLINS TELLS

In the June American Magazine Eddie Collins, the wonderful second baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, writes an article entitled "Connie Mack and His Mackmen," in which he tells many inside facts and stories about the great Philadelphia baseball magnate. He says that Mack never tears down and always builds up, and that he is ingenious in his methods of inspiring confidence in his men. The following story taken from the article illustrates this point:

"There comes to me an incident when he built McInnes's confidence wonderfully, when 'Stuffy' was still doing bench duty. In a game against Chicago a critical situation was looming up. In the eighth inning the score was 5 to 4 against us. After two were out, Barry singled and Lapp came to bat. By this time Mack was beginning to fidget and squirm uneasily in his seat, something he always does when the crisis of a game seems about to break. I heard Harry Davis, who was then captain, say:

"'Connie! Are you going to let —— bat?'

"Davis had mentioned the pitcher, a notoriously weak hitter. I saw McInnis watching Mack out of the corner of his eyes. The youngster trembled eagerly, hoping for a chance to go to bat in the pinch, and I think Mack saw him too, for he said to Davis rather loudly:

"'You know very well who is going to hit if Lapp gets on. There's only one man I'd put up—eh?'

"Davis inclined his head toward McInnis and Mack nodded. McInnis saw all this, as Mack meant he should. Subsequently Lapp smashed out a two base hit, putting Barry on third, and McInnis, told to go to bat, rushed out from the dugout swelling with confidence. He had heard Mack as much as say there was 'no other man on the team he would trust in this pinch but me.' McInnis at that moment possessed overwhelming self-confidence. A moment later he drove out the hit that won the game. Mack's little bit of diplomacy had met with success.

"There came a situation during the last world series against the Giants that gave Schang, our young catcher, confidence. Barry was on first base and nobody was out. It was Schang's turn to go to bat, and turning to Mack he said:

"'What shall I do; put Barry over, hit?'

"'Use your own judgment,' replied Mack.

"Clearly Mack had confidence in him. An important moment in the world series, Schang doubtless thought, and Mack leaves it all with me. Now when a young ball player thinks that way he gains self-confidence; that is, if he has the right stuff in him. Well, Schang went up there and instead of doing the easy thing, sacrificing, he chose to hit and drove out a ball that let Barry race to third base.

"The moral of this incident is that it is Mack's policy to create confidence in your own ability. Any man who can do that for other men. I don't care whether it's in baseball, or finance, is a master of his profession.

"Mack always sits in the middle of the bench, the team captain on one side and the youngsters near at hand. Once he is seated, rarely does he ever get up. Even if the crowd infringes on the field and shuts off his view to right or left, I have never seen him leave his position. Seldom does he ever rise even to go to the ice cooler on the warmest day. I think it must be a superstition with him to stay in that same pose throughout the game. From the stands he looks motionless; however, he is under a terrific mental strain. He is one of the nerviest men in the world when a game is being contested. He seems to be just a bundle of nerves, drawn on the edge of the bench and ready to collapse if something out of the ordinary happens, only he never collapses; it has always been a wonder to me how the man can restrain himself from giving vent to some hysterical outburst. I know that when the game tightens he fairly writhes, and every year he wears out two suits of clothes from simply squirming around on close plays. Once on a close decision, with one of our men sliding into the home plate with the winning run at a time when winning runs meant the pennant, Mack became so excited that he half slid off the bench, and Plank yelled: 'Look out, Connie, you'll slide into the subway.'

"Every morning at 10 we gather in the clubhouse; if the team is on the road we meet in Connie's room in the hotel. We are never in session less than ten minutes or rarely more than half an hour. But in that time the game to be played that afternoon is sometimes won. Every point of the defensive and offensive strength of the opposing team is discussed. Mack will mention the pitcher that our opponents will probably use, and instantly a scheme of attack is devised. This attack varies as we meet different pitchers. Always in those morning meetings Mack goes over the entire situation and plans the battle."

BASEBALL AND ART.

(By Edmund Vance Cook.)

Baseball? I scorn to take its part
On lesser grounds than those of Art
I hear
Your sneer,
But why is not the wide, glad view
Of golden day—and action, too—
More than the little, canvassed square,
That mimicry of Nature there,
Viewed in the stagnant gallery air?
Shall I not stay and let you go
To cast yourself before Corot
And grovel down before Wattau?

Must art be ancient ere it thrive?
Why, look you here is art—alive!
To view
A hue
Like Titian loved, behold the head
Of Donahue, forenamed the Red!
Here stands "the discus thrower."
Speak!
Why better if he were antique?
Hibernian gods are good as Greek!
Why should New York and its vicinity
Bow down before a Greek divinity
When they have had their own McGinnity?

No matter of what school you be,
Though Raphaellite or Post- or Pre-,
Take heart
Of Art;
For here it is and here its fruits.
Here Hector fights and Priam roots!
Here burns the fire Time may not quench!
With brow a-frown and fist a-clench,
Achilles sulks upon the bench!
Look! look again! and gain your fill
Of Art alive, and feel its thrill!
Ajax defies the umpire still!

FARMERETTE WOULD RATHER RANCH THAN DO THE TANGO.

MRS. C. E. CONANT, FARMERETTE.

San Francisco, May 29.—Mrs. C. E. Conant arrived from Honolulu recently on the liner Matsonia with a host of ideas obtained on Hawaiian plantations which she will use in the Imperial valley, where she is to be a "farmerette."

Until April 21 she was Miss Margaret Pewtress. Conant, whom she married, is a New York lawyer, who made a fortune ranching in the Imperial valley. They went to Honolulu for a honeymoon.

"Farm life is splendid," said Mrs. Conant. "I can hardly wait till I get down to the ranch. It's more fun to grow cotton than to tango, and I'd rather look after the sheep and the stock than take a vacation trip to the mid-Pacific."

HOW MORGAN GOT WASHINGTON WILL

Financier Says Father Acquired It From His Family.

IS FAMOUS DOCUMENT

Washington, June 1.—J. P. Morgan has revealed for the first time how the will of Martha Washington, which he refuses to return to the state of Virginia, came into the possession of his father. At the same time Mrs. William Cummings Story, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, read to that body in annual session here the entire correspondence between Mr. Morgan and Governor Stuart.

Mr. Morgan's statement follows:

"The will of Martha Washington was taken from the Fairfax court house in 1862 by a colonel in the Union army, who rescued it from destruction by his men. This officer retained it in his possession for thirty years, and shortly before his death, in 1892, gave it to his daughter, who, thirteen years later, in 1905, sold it to the late J. Pierpont Morgan.

"This account she related at the time of the transfer. She stated that her father's regiment garrisoned Fairfax Court House in 1862, and that he had headquarters in the court house. Another command had previously occupied the place and the men had broken open the safes. The floors were littered with papers, which the colonel's men used in making fires. Entering headquarters one day he found his men shoveling papers into a stove. He stopped them, and in examining the papers found the Martha Washington will.

"He carefully preserved the document throughout his life, and on the eve of his death gave it to his daughter."

Two Offers Are Made.

The correspondence read by Mrs. Story revealed that Mr. Morgan suggested to Governor Stuart two plans for the preservation of the historic document. One was that he would present the will for public exhibition at Mount Vernon, the other was that the will be preserved by the Congressional library at Washington. With both of these suggestions Mr. Morgan couples another, that George Washington's will be exhibited with it.

Mr. Morgan asserts that his reason for refusing to return the will to the authorities of Fairfax county is that the court house is not fireproof and also that the place is "out of the way." He agreed to have photographs of the document transmitted to the proper custodians and asked for the return courtesy of the receipt of photographs of the will of George Washington, which is the most valued of Fairfax county's old documents. This was turned down and legal measures threatened.

The suggestion at which Fairfax county balks completely is that the citizens of Fairfax county would agree to have the George Washington will taken to either of the places he stipulated, whereupon Mr. Morgan would gladly place the Martha Washington will beside it.

Governor Stuart has rejected this proposition. As affairs now stand it remains to be seen if the state of Virginia will press the suit against Mr. Morgan which the legislature has authorized.

Mr. Morgan, in his answer to Governor Stuart, wrote under date of March 17:

"The Fairfax county court house, from what I am informed, is not fireproof, nor are documents there kept in such a way as to make them available to any large number of people. I also understand that the original will of George Washington is at present stored in that court house.

"I suggest, therefore, that the commonwealth of Virginia, or Fairfax county, should direct the keeper of the documents in the court house to place the original will of George Washington on exhibition at Mount Vernon, for an indefinite period, where it would be available for the instruction of a large number of people, and where it would have the benefit of the great care and protection against fire now given to Mount Vernon.

"If this were done, I should be very glad to present the will of Martha Washington to the Mount Vernon Ladies' association for permanent exhibition there. * * * Should the commonwealth of Virginia not be willing to do this * * * I propose that the commonwealth should present the will of George Washington to the library of congress, to be forever kept within the public records there, and I should present the will of Martha Washington to the nation for the same disposition."

In objecting to both these plans, Governor Stuart, under date of April 8, reiterated that "the people of Virginia hold that the Martha Washington will is a part of the records of Fairfax county, and that it belongs there, if anywhere in Virginia."

To this Mr. Morgan replied, under date of April 17:

"The dispositions which I proposed, reached in deliberation, still impress me as the best that could be made of these historic documents, and their declination leaves me at a loss for additional suggestion."

BRINGS OUT NEW VEHICLE.

E. W. Sigl Invents Five Passenger Side Car.

E. W. Sigl, foreman of the Pennsylvania master mechanic's drafting room, has secured patents upon a side car for motorcycles which he had on the streets demonstrating Saturday night and which he claims is a decided improvement over all other side cars. Mr. Sigl's car has two seats which will comfortably accommodate three passengers and with provision on the motorcycle for carrying two, it makes the carrying capacity of the side car five persons. The rigiflex, as Mr. Sigl calls his side car, can be readily attached to any kind of a motorcycle and it can be mounted on any size wheel from eighteen inches to thirty or more inches, according to the size of the machine to which it is to be attached. The advantages this side car possesses over other cars is the total elimination of side-draft and its flexibility in turning corners, its capacity being 45 degrees without inconvenience to the occupant. In the trial trips around the city Saturday the Rigiflex carried 1,000 pounds and with this heavy load there was no apparent side-draft. Mr. Sigl expects to sell the manufacturing right to some manufacturer of side cars.

The telegraph department of a railroad is charged with the responsibility of directing and handling all train movement and furnishing the necessary means of communication for operating the road.

The telegraph department of the Western division of the Pennsylvania company, of which Homer B. Reynolds, of this city, is the managing official, is composed of 225 telegraph operators, signalmen and linemen. The train dispatching department, of which Mr. Harry E. Hart, also of this city, is the directing official, is composed of sixteen train dispatchers and a clerk.

The territory composing the Western division extends from Crestline, Ohio, to Clarke, Ind., or a total distance of 255 miles. If the wires between these points were stretched into a single strand, they would make a line 6,525 miles in length. Naturally when a severe storm visits any part of this territory and trees fall over the wires, or wires become crossed, or any of the other multitude of things which do happen, it means busy times for this department.

Dotted here and there along the line are the telegraph offices to the number of seventy-five, located from two to twelve miles apart. Some of these offices are simply signal offices, where records are made of passing time of trains and through which the train dispatcher transmitts or receives information to or from passing trains. Others are interlocking towers from which the crossover or sub-tracks switches are operated, or the de-rails and "wye" switches and signals are operated at railroad crossings and other duties relating to train movement are performed. At some points the telegraph operator handles street crossing gates in connection with his other work. Again there are several stations at which telegraph offices are maintained for the accommodation of the station agent and public alone.

The Western division of the Pennsylvania company is crossed by twenty-one other steam railroads, and all but three of them, i. e., the C., H. & D. and L. E. & W. railroads at Lima, Ohio, and the Wabash railway at Fort Wayne, Ind., are protected by interlocking. The Pennsylvania company having charge of the operation of all interlocking plants on the Western division, with the exception of those at the Hocking Valley crossing at Upper Sandusky, Ohio, the Grand Trunk crossing at Valparaiso, Ind., the E. J. & E. crossing at Hobart, Ind., and the Michigan Central crossing at Tolleston, Ind. The first interlocking tower built on the Western division was at Grand Trunk crossing at Valparaiso, Ind., in 1884. The latest one built was at Plymouth, Ind., interlocking the L. E. & W., Vandalia and Pennsylvania company tracks, built in 1908.

A telegraph operator on the Western division is almost without exception a Pennsylvania man heart and soul. The division operator finds him springing up somewhere within sound of the schreeching car wheels, the roar of the exhaust and the warning whistle of the passing train, located usually in or near the small towns along the line. From childhood he has watched the performance of thousands of trains as they pass by. He becomes interested and his heart swells with pride when he goes home some night and tells the folks that the local operator or agent has consented to accept him as a telegraph student. Later on he is ready for examination and, if capable, enters on the roll as an extra operator. It is by this method then that the demand for new men is met. "Homegrown" operators prove the best, the most loyal and when time comes, the most worthy of promotion.

Monsignor Chiesa May Be Next Pope

Monsignor Della Chiesa, archbishop of Pologna, is a member of the new sacred college at Rome and one of the strongest possibilities for the next pope.

He was formerly under secretary of state for Cardinal Rompolla when the latter was secretary of state for Pope Leo XIII.

Following the recent death of Rompolla, Della Chiesa inherits much of his strength and support in the sacred college. He will be the papal candidate of that portion of the sacred college which favors a return to the policies of Pope Leo XIII.

Pennsylvania Florist Pays Visit to Fort Wayne.

The Pennsylvania flower train was here this morning and left 600 plants to be set out in the parks at the new passenger station. Something like 4,900 feet of hedge is also to be planted at those parks, but it is now too late for that work and this shrubbery will be planted next fall. The flower train is in charge of W. F. Hutchinson, whose father is the company's chief florist who has charge of the immense green houses at Sewickley. Robert Kinsman will supervise the work of planting the flowers in the parks. He has been engaged in that kind of work for the Pennsylvania company a number of years. The flower train consisted of a coach and a baggage car, each loaded to the roof when they left Sewickley.

HAS WON WEALTH IN PHILIPPINES

H. R. Andreas, Former Soldier, on First Vacation in Sixteen Years.

EARLY ON THE JOB

San Francisco, June 1.—After sixteen years' work in the province of Ambos Camarines, in the Philippine islands, H. R. Andreas, who arrived here recently, has made his fortune.

Andreas is a hero of the early Philippine warfare. He carries the scars of gunshot and bolo slashes received in the process of the subjugation of the Filipinos.

H. R. ANDREAS.

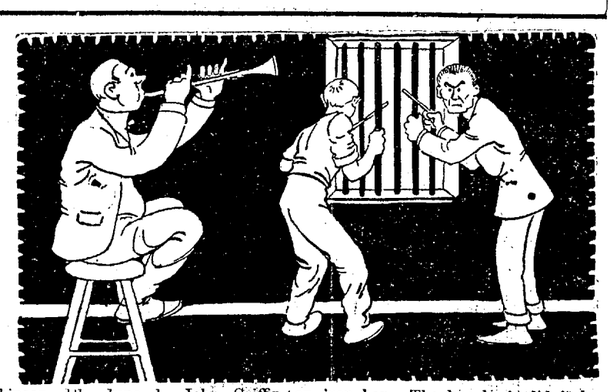
Andreas is on his way to his home in Millville, N. J., a little town about forty miles from Philadelphia, to visit his aged parents, whom he made comfortable with the fortune he amassed in the Philippines.

For years Andreas made money out of his cocoanut plantation of 2,600 acres. Three years ago it was discovered that the land was rich in gold, which could be worked at a large profit by dredging process.

Andreas is said to be worth about $150,000 and the dredgers will continue to grind out dividends while he is home on his first vacation in sixteen years.

Andreas graduated ffrom the University of Pennsylvania when he was twenty years old and went to the Philippines with the Tenth Pennsylvania volunteers in 1898.

HE WAS NO SOUSA, BUT HIS RAGTIME WAS GREAT FOR A QUICK GETAWAY.



Robinson, Ill., June 1.—John Griffin is some clarinet player. He played well and he played loud.

Some of the boarders in the county "bastile" complained that Griffin made too much noise with his rag-time clarinet. They said there was a rasping note in his music that they didn't like—sounded something like a file scratching an iron bar. The knocker's didn't hurt Griffin's feelings a bit. He trumpted louder than ever. The Morning Jaild Howard found the bars of Griffin's cell filed through and, the burglar and two other prisoners missing, he agreed with the crowd that Griff wasn't much of a musician, but that he was some artist to break jail with a raspy old clarinet.

PUT SULPHUR ON AN ITCHING SKIN AND END ECZEMA

Says this old-time Eczema remedy is applied like cold cream.

Any irritation or breaking out on the face, arms, legs or body when accompanied by itching, or when the skin is dry and feverish, can be readily overcome by applying a little bold-sulphur cream, says a noted dermatologist.

He states that bold-sulphur instantly allays the angry itching and irritation and soothes and heals the Eczema right up leaving the skin clear and smooth. Bold-sulphur has occupied a secure position for many years in the treatment of cutaneous disorders because of its parasite-destroying property. Nothing has ever been found to take its place in treating the irritable and inflammatory skin affections. While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to subdue the itching irritation and drive the Eczema away and it is often years later before any eruption again appears on the skin.

Those troubled should obtain at any pharmacy an ounce of bold-sulphur cream which is applied to the affected parts in the same manner as an ordinary cold cream.—Adv.

ONE OF THESE BABIES IS BORN TO DIE—HUNDREDS GIVE UP STRUGGLE EVERY SUMMER.

THE CHILDREN OF MAN ALONE ARE DOOMED TO RUN THE GAUNTLET OF NEEDLESS SUFFERING.

(By Caroline Coe.)

During every twenty-four hours in the United States one thousand women go down to the very gates of death through the long, dark, agonizing alley of pain to bring forth a child—a tiny, helpless babe to suffer and to die within the year.

And almost all of these thousand children could be saved to grow into the maturity of helpful lives and good citizenship if the mothers who had borne them and loved them would only realize that certain material common sense should be used in rearing children.

A woman needs more than that blind animal love which will fight for her child, but does not take the trouble to use common sense and patience in its care. Many young mothers error through ignorance, and then when too late grieve over little open graves.

The whole brute creation rears its young with a certainty of it arriving at maturity without sickness of any sort. The children of man alone are doomed to run the gauntlet of cruel and needless suffering.

Every mother should know that not only nature's cure, but nature's prevention of many of the ills that attack young babies is mother's milk. But experience has demonstrated that even this liquid food must be of such quality and quantity and received at such intervals as to admit of perfect digestion and rapid assimilation.

After the birth of your child do not dose it with saffron tea, sweetened water or diluted cow's milk until your milk "comes."

In the breasts of the mother there is a substance secreted known as colostrum—thinner than milk and very scant, but it is nature's prescription for cleansing the digestive organs of the new-born child. Thus the child should be put to the breast as soon as the mother has recovered from her travail.

During the first month the baby should be fed every two hours, never oftener. (I am presupposing that the mother's milk is good and contains the normal amount of nutrition.)

After that until the baby is weaned, once in three hours, with an effort to cut down night feeding, is often enough.

Always sit upright when nursing your baby, whether night or day, and no infant should be allowed to nurse longer than twenty minutes.

Where there is plenty of milk and the child is lusty, ten or twenty minutes are enough unless the milk is scanty. The child should nurse from but one breast at each feeding, and it should not be allowed to take its meal too rapidly, as this is liable to produce hiccough and spitting up of food.

The spitting up of food immediately after feeding means that the baby is taking more than its stomach will hold comfortably. Stop nursing if this occurs. If the spitting up occurs some time after feeding, it means indigestion, probably because the milk is too rich. In this case the child should have one or two tablespoons of water before feeding.

A woman who does much work about her house should wash her nipples with a solution of boracic acid each time before feeding the baby.

Don't think that every time the baby cries it is hungry. It may be crying because it has eaten too much.

Above all else, don't feed your baby anything but breast milk until it is six weeks old. After that a little orange juice, oatmeal or barley water may be given under nurse's or physician's orders.

HUMAN ALARM CLOCK AWAKENS HUNDREDS OVER TELEPHONE.

MISS ELLEN JOHNSON, "HUMAN ALARM CLOCK."

Every night there are some 250 to 300 ordinary alarm clocks lost, strayed or stolen, or otherwise destroyed in this city.

So when Willie who juggles neckties in a downtown department store, wants to be sure that he'll not oversleep, he turns in an emergency call to the chief supervisor at the telephone office.

Willie has to take an oath or an affirmation that his usual alarm clock is "busted" or stolen.

The chief supervisor is very inquisitive on that point and will not consent to help out except in an emergency case.

If Willie satisfies her that her aid must come forth or he'll lose his job, Miss Johnson or one of the "human alrm clocks" is notified to call him at an appointed time.

Miss Johnson alone wakes 20 to 30 people every morning.

"Of course, we don't do that except in emergency cases," she says, "and we don't ring the same number indefinitely. They've got to buy real alarm clocks after few days. The company allows us to wake people only as a matter of accomodation to them and not as a privilege to which they're entitled."

Whitley County News.

Columbia City, Ind., June 1.—Oscar Fleming, the young navy lad who returned to his home in Thorncreek township, after serving his full time in the navy, will not return to the seat of trouble, but instead has accepted employment at the Miller Dairy farm.

Mrs. Ida Lore-Wagoner, who suffered a fracture of her leg near the knee six weeks ago, is now able to get around with the use of a crutch and the injury is knitting nicely.

Nine bids have been filed with the postmaster for the carrying of mail to and from trains to the local postoffice. Judd Windle, the present incumbent of the position, is receiving $700 annually, and thinks that he can better himself by accepting other employment.

The teaching staff of the public schools for the next year will be the same as the recently closed term, with the exception of four teachers, Miss Marie Galbreath, Miss Frances Dinkmeyer, Miss Kate Baker and Miss Blanche Magley retiring. Their respective places will be filled by Firmer Born, Thomas B. McGuire, Miss Ruth Donahue and Miss Mabel Blake. J. C. Sanders will remain superintendent.

Mrs. Mary E. Smith vs. William Sanford Smith is the title of the latest divorce case to be filed in the circuit court. The parties to the suit are residents of Jefferson township.

Supt. Frank Shultz, of the city electric and water plant, has notified the merchants that unless they agree to live up to their contract of keeping live light bulbs in the ornamental street lights, that he will shut off the current and leave the city in darkness rather than see the ugly spectacle of only part of the lamps burning and the other part in darkness.

Misses Ethel Hiner, Winona Mickey and Mabel Murch, of Butler, who were the guests of Misses Hazel Harrison and Ethel Weick for several days, have returned to their home.

Thomas Pontius, Thomas Hildebrand, Mr. and Mrs. William Pogue, Keller Sheeler, W. H. Kissinger, Walpole Kaler, J. C. Sanders, Elmer Grant and Harry Bollinger, John Clapham, Lloyd Bailey and Elmer Ricker formed three auto parties who left Friday for Indianapolis to attend the races.

A compilation of the graduates from 1881 to 1912, from the high school, shows that out of the 408 graduates 5 have become lawyers, 136 teachers, 2 dentists, 8 doctors, 13 merchants, 51 tradesmen and women, 83 day laborers, 66 girls, miscellaneous, and 8 boys farmers. Twenty boys and sixteen girls from the classes of 1908-1912 are yet attending college.

Jacob Plattner is confined to his home with a severe case of erysipelas in his foot.

The following committees, with the chairman of each, is below given for the handling of the Lincoln Chautauqua in July and August, for which enough tickets have already been subscribed to insure the entertainments: Advertising, W. H. Kissinger, chairman; tickets, W. H. Carter, chairman; grounds and seats, M. L. Galbreath, chairman; entertainment, D. V. Whiteleather, chairman; music, Attorney B. J. Bloom, chairman. The officers of this year's association are J. C. Sanders, president; Samuel F. Trembley, vice president; Hugo Logan, treasurer; A. R. Eleck, secretary.

Fred Yontz, Donald Warren and Miss Merle Weick have gone to Indianapolis to visit relatives. Miss Ethel Weick also accompanied the party.

Homer Eberhard has arrived home from Purdue university, where he graduated from a two year course in pharmacy. He will attend the commencement exercises at Lafayette next week and return and accept a position in the Mier and Keiser drug store.

GET RID OF YOUR RHEUMATISM.

Now is the time to get rid of your rheumatism. You can do it if you apply Chamberlain's Liniment. W. A. Lockhard, Homer City, N. By using one bottle of it I was entirely cured." For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

DOCTOR TELLS HOW TO SHED BAD COMPLEXION.

We cannot restore degenerated facial tissue any more than we can restore a lost limb. It is useless to attempt to convert a worn-out complexion into a new one. The rational procedure is to remove the complexion instead—remove the devitalized cuticle. Not by surgical means, however, as the underlying cutis is too thin, too tender, to withstand immediate exposure. Applying ordinary mercolized wax will gradually absorb the offending cuticle. By degrees, a new, youthful skin appears; a skin soft and delicately tinted as a rose petal.

No lady need hesitate to try this. Procure an ounce of mercolized wax of the druggist. Spread on a thin layer before retiring, removing this in the morning with soap and water. In from one to two weeks the complexion is completely transformed.

An approved treatment for wrinkles is provided by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. Bathing the face in the solution brings prompt and remarkable results.—A. R. Mackenzie in Popular Medicine.

ASTOR WILL GIVE UP YACHT NORMA

Offers Handsome Vessel to United States if It is Needed FOR WAR PURPOSES

Washington, June 1.—Vincent Astor's friends say that he may offer his beautiful yacht Noma to the government for service in the Mexican controversy, if she is needed.

Before the illness of Vincent Astor, when he and his bride, who was Miss Helen D. Huntington, were planning a honeymoon cruise on the Noma, an order was given to refurnish the yacht at an expense of $70,000.

This sum was added to expenditures much greater than had preceded it. The yacht was already as elegant as anything afloat, so the extra furnishings were intended, no doubt, to make it more like Paradise.

Other changes were made in the machinery to increase the speed of the engines and their power. The yacht today, therefore, is not only one of the most comfortable and luxurious boats afloat, but also the best equipped mechanically.

The wireless equipment is of the latest and the best. The yacht is lighted and heated by electricity, but has fireplaces, easy chairs, full beds, a library, business office for the owner, a beautiful saloon drawingroom and bathrooms—everything in fact, that a millionaire would require ashore.

In the so-called bridal chamber is a beam ceiling, solid brass bed, mahogany chiffonier, tapestry curtains and diffused electric light to illuminate the apartment.

In the music room is a miniature player piano. The mantel here is of solid marble.

In the dining saloon coziness and comfort are the prevailing idea. An old style square table of precious woods is the main article of furniture.

Cost of Purchase vs. Cost of Results

Which Do You Consider of Greatest Importance?

There are two costs to every gas range, the purcahse cost and operation cost. One gives you ownership and the other gives you results.

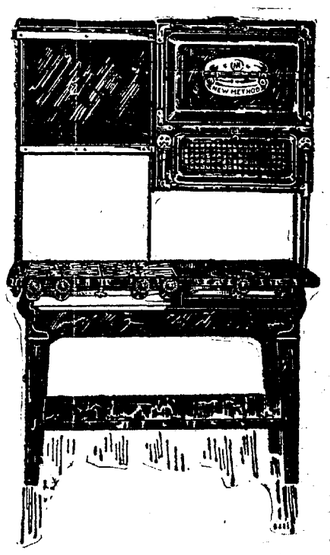
A house wife owned a gas range that was always out of repair. Each week she ruined several loaves of bread, a cake or two and a pound or more of meat. The weekly loss was about the same. Her gas bill was never under $2.00 monthly.

Finally she realized the necessity of buying a new gas range. This time she resolved to buy a good one. She bought a new Method Gas Range at out store and paid $30.00 for it. She saved the 75c weekly that she formerly lost through too much or too little heat, and this totaled $39 yearly, or more than the entire cost of a range.

Her gas bills were reduced to $1.25 monthly.

Saving her another 75c monthly, or $9 per year, a grand total saving of $48.

Remember, when selecting your new gas range that its operating cost is the most important, and remember, too, that New Method Gas Ranges are guaranteed to use from 20% to 40% less gas, and to give more perfect baking result than any other gas range made.



New Method Gas Ranges are sold exclusively at our store

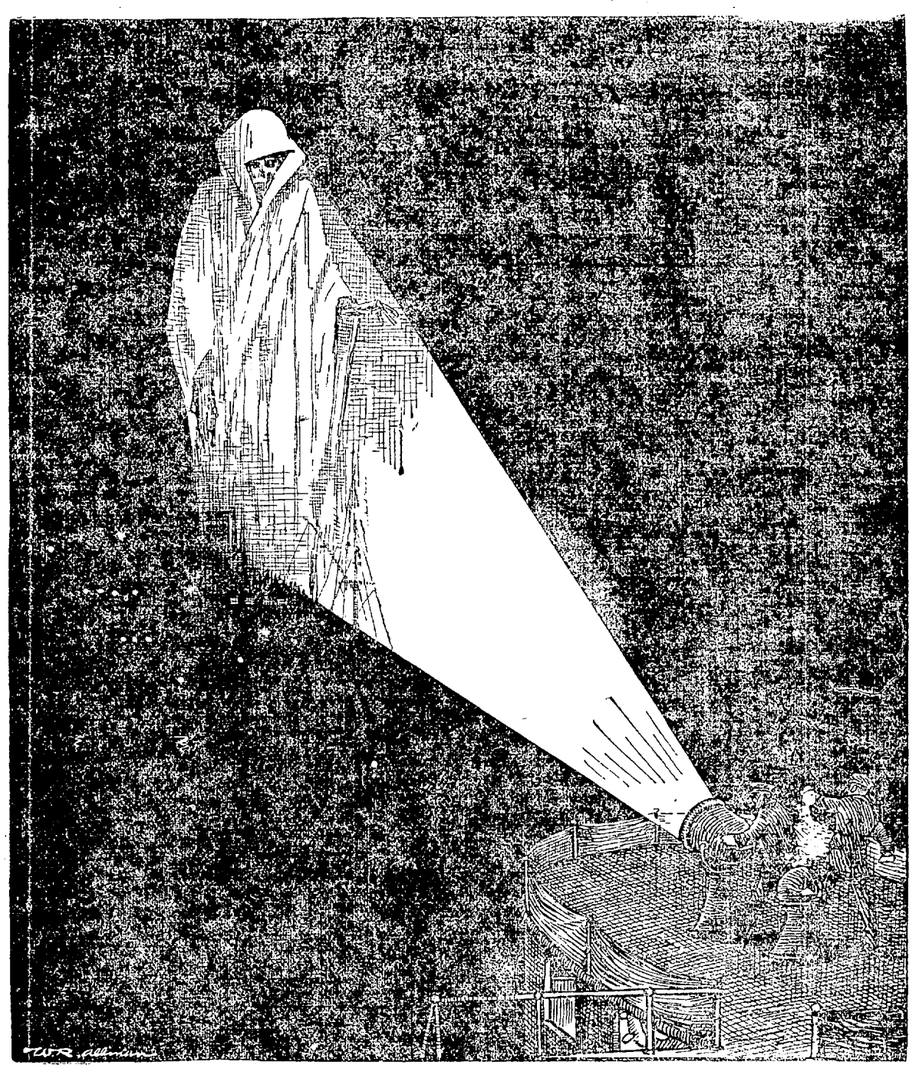
DEATH AHOY!



Posey County's Notable Century of First Things

Often Ridiculed Section Down in "Pocket" of Indiana Will Soon Celebrate —Has Had Remarkable History.

New Harmony, Ind., June 1.—New Harmony is to hold a centennial celebration the week of June 6-13, which will recall to the attention of at least a part of the world the remarkable socialistic community attempted in this country by Robert Owen almost a hundred years ago. Americans seldom hear of New Harmony these days, unless they chance to be riding on the Evansville branch of the Illinois Central railroad, and the average man, if asked, "What made New Harmony famous?" might be tumped for an answer.

Perhaps if the question were put, "What was the New Harmony movement?" or "Where did Robert Owen attempt his famous community settlement?" most persons would be able to recall from their sociological studies how this little out-of-the-way town on the bank of the Wabash was once famous for a time on two continents—the subject of bitter debates in halls of legislation, of editorial tirades and pulpit invectives, and how even Byron had memorialized it in "Don Juan." It probably might also occur to a still smaller number that the issues at stake in this long-ago effort to establish an ideal community had, although apparently failing entirely at the time, been the basis nevertheless of at least some of the great social and industrial reforms since adopted in many parts of the world.

But the "centennial commission" of New Harmony wants to remind all the world of its former greatness—wants to be "put back on the map"—and hence its plan for an eight-day celebration at which President Taft will be the principal speaker. To some it may seem an incongruous situation to have the most conservative president of the present generation appearing as chief orator at an event in commemoration of the most radical socialistic effort of the first half century of United States history. Yet it should be borne in mind that not only did "the permanent community" which Robert Owen established in New Harmony live less than two years, but that the "ten lost tribes of communism," which succeded it, have long since been scattered, and that from the original movement the New Harmony of today has inherited only some concrete educational, political and industrial reforms which got their first impetus at that time and still survive under other forms of government than that attempted by Owen and his followers.

The "centennial commission" takes cognizance of these inheritances from the Owen regime even though the great "emancipator of labor" is not himself mentioned in the program advertising the approaching event (and the subjects of "socialism" and "communism" are alike taboo in the topics assigned to the various speakers), for the advance circular makes the following boasts concerning New Harmon's part in history:

The first woman's club, the Minerva, was organized here by Miss Constance Owen Fauntleroy in 1859.

The first kindergarten was organized here in 1826.

The first free school in America was established here in 1826.

The first co-educational school was established here in 1826.

Manual training was easrly recognized as an important factor in the educational system.

Prohibition by administrative government was first enforced here.

The right of women to take part in local legislative government was first asserted here by Frances Wright.

Some of these claims are likely to be disputed, in just the form that they are made, but there is no doubt of the wonderfully advanced ideals entertained by this remarkable man, who came out of England's factory district to establish in the new world a community where men and women would be liberated from many of the unnecessary burdens that had been imposed upon them by tradition. But the assertion that New Harmony had the first woman's club seems to be a modest one, judging by George B. Lockwood's "The New Harmony Communities," which asserts the existence in New Harmony of the "Woman's Social society" in 1826, and says that society was in turn succeeded by the "first woman's literary club in the United States."

That Robert Owen himself always advocated equal privileges for the sexes, and that his New Harmony community afforded the first example of woman's suffrage in this country may also be conceded. There is no question that his plan of co-education attracted wide attention, although the statement that it was first tried in New Harmony may be questioned. The educational part of Owen's program is one of the remarkable features of it, viewed at this late day, and it seems almost incredible that he should have attracted, as he did, to such a remote, out-of-the-way place the notable list of scholars (including William Maclure, Joseph Neef, Charles A. Lesueur, Gerard Troost, Thomas Say and others), who were eager to help carry out his dreams. But that the public appreciated it is sbown by the fact that pupils came to New Harmony even from New York and Philadelphia, and in 1826 the task of reaching New Harmony (which even today is far away from the main lines of travel) was no small one.

Yet the term "kindergarten" as applied to the New Harmony ventures for the education of children will be disputed by most of the present-day kindergarten workers, who credit Froebel with being the first kindergarten teacher, in 1837. Then Owen's own writings say that his "infant" schools in New Harmony were adapted after the "infant" schools which he previously had conducted in New Lanark before coming to America, so that, admitting that infant schools and kindergartens are really the same thing, New Harmony can hardly be credited with the first kindergarten.

Lockwood's history confirms the statement, however, that "the boys and girls were received on the same terms" at the New Harmony school, and that the instruction provided for them was the same; and it also describes at some length the nature of the manual training that was given.

Most of the claims made in behalf of New Harmony, therefore, by the committee in charge of the celebration, appear to be fairly well founded, and the little old town in the southwestern corner of Indiana, which so seldom is heard of in these days, really has a history that deserves attention at the passing of its centenary.

Owen did not reach New Harmony until December, 1825, so that it is necessary to go back to still another movement to explain why the centennial is scheduled for 1914. This is because of the existence previous to the arrival of Robert Owen and his followers, of the sect known as the Rappites, disciples of George Rapp, an emigrant from Southern Wuertemburg, who came to America in 1804, and after first locating in Pennsylvania migrated in 1814 to the banks of the Wabash in Southern Indiana, where they established a community which they called "Harmonie." This was in many ways a socialistic organization, although lacking the intelligence that characterized the Owen movement. The Rappites, nevertheless, built up a prosperous community within a short time, and for a few years Harmonie was the largest town in the territory of Indiana. But in 1824 Rapp, for various reasons, tired of his new location, and sent his son to England to negotiate the sale of all the lands which had been acquired by the colony at Harmonie. Robert Owen was at this time planning his ideal community and he effected a deal for the 30,000 acres owned by the Rappites, and the latter gave up their town and farms and vineyards and moved to a new community in Pennsylvania, which they named Economy.

Owen's followers, when they came to Indiana, changed the name of Harmonie to New Harmony.

College Co-ed Can Stand on Her Head in Big Water Tank

Madison, Wis., June 1.—Miss Lili Muensch, of Pittsburg, is the original college mermaid. When women swimmers of the University of Wisconsin saw her in the big swimming tank, head down and feet kicking above the water, half a dozen jumped in to her rescue.

"What did you do that for?" asked Miss Muensch. And to show that she was not drowning, she repeated the trick of standing on her head in the water.

There have been women long distance swimming champions and fancy divers, but Miss Muensch is said to be the first woman to stand on her head under water.

FINDS IN EUROPE BEST AND WORST

New York Journalist Tells of High and Low Places

"ACROSS THE POND"

New York, June 1.—What do you see when you go to Europe? Are the European countries better or worse than America? One can not judge by the opinions of the average traveler because they do not agree.

Many of the European tourists don't know anything about their own country, so their comparisons are not worth while.

Now comes Karl K. Kitchen, New York newspaper man and noted traveler, who tells what he saw in Europe. Kitchen was born in the central west, and he wouldn't be lost in either Oshkosh or Munich at 1 o'clock in the morning.

Kitchen recounts in this wise two score of the most striking things he saw across the Atlantic:

Best food—In Vienna and Paris.
Best opera—At La Scala in Milan.
Gayest city—Budapest.
Best subway—The Nord-Sud in Paris.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, June 1.—Predictions that the Kansas yield would amount to as much as 180,000,000 bushels, had a bearish influence today on wheat. It was estimated that fewer than 40,000 acres sown would be abandoned. Prices opened ½@¾c off to ⅛c up, hardened a trifle and then made a decided down shoot.

Corn weakened with wheat but rallied on account of continued averse weather in Argentine. Opening prices, which were ⅛c lower to a like advance, were followed by a setback all around but afterward by a moderate upturn.

Bullish crop advices from Illinois points brought good support for oats. The market, though, showed some sympathy with the declines in other cereals.

Provisions developed firmness owing to hog receipts being less numerous than expected. On the other hand trade lacked volume.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, June 1.—The week in the stock market opened with virtually no change from the dormant conditions which have so long prevailed. Price changes were nominal, except in Missouri Pacific and a few specialties, the former gaining a point, with two points advance for Texas company, Union Pacific and United States Steel selling ex-dividend were reactionary, that same tendency being shown by other leaders. Missouri Pacific soon yielded much of its rise on further uncertainty connected with the no extension plan which comes up for final decision today.

Another statement from President Wilson in which he attributed the business depression in part to the attitude of the railroads, was received here with some interest but failed to expert any influence. In the absence of any business from London and Paris, where the markets were observing the Whitsuntide holidays, the fall of the French ministry was ignored, local bankers attaching little financial significance to the event. Missouri Pacific continued to move uncertainly during the early session, with increased dullness throughout the list. Bonds were steady.

The market closed heavy today. Missouri Pacific dominated the market, dealings in that stock for the greater part of the session exceeding transactions in any of the leaders. The result of the note extension plan was still unsettled, when trading terminated at the day's lowest level, Missouri Pacific falling abruptly. More gold for Paris was withdrawn.

DAILY MARKET LETTER.

(Furnished by J. S. Phillips, North American Building, Fort Wayne, Ind).

Chicago, June 1.—B. W. Snow threw the biggest June wheat estimate into the pit ever known, with the chance of a total wheat crop of 906,000,000 bushels. European wheat news indicates that the nine big countries outside Russia will raise 70,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels less than one year ago. The Snow figures were questioned. He places winter wheat at 92.6; spring wheat at 96.7 and oats at 91.7. July wheat is under influence of the 10 to 12c cash wheat premium. Popular sentiment favors bulge sale.

The oats world is not afraid of a June estimate of 1,100,000,000 million bushels oats. A small oats crop was formerly 800,000,000 or 900,000,000 bushels. Now it is a billion. Corn bears are afraid that the June run will be small and Argentina fails to relieve their position. Packers have been successful in lowering the hog price.

Foster predicts very serious drouth between June 5 and 13. Oats and corn promise resilience. The June cotton condition of 74 is the lowest since the 70.5 of 1907 and suggests poor corn and oats conditions in many southern states.

Prices of stocks at 2:45 p. m. as follows:

Atchison, 97⅝; Smelter, 63¼; Copper, 72⅛; B. & O., 90¾; Brooklyn Rapid Transit, 93½; C. & O., 51⅞; Canadian Pacific, 195⅝; Erie, 29; Great Northern, 124½; Missouri Pacifisc, 19¼; Northern Pacific, 111; New York Central, 91⅝; Pennsylvania, 111½; Reading, 165⅛; St. Paul, 99¾; Southern Pacific, 92⅜; New Haven, 65⅝; Union Pacific, 155½; U. S. Steel, 61⅛.

Ex-Div. today—Southern Pacific, 1½ per cent.; Union Pacific, 2 per cent.; U. S. Steel, 1¼ per cent.

Defalcations in United States in 1913 Put at $40,000,000.

New York, June 1.—A large surety company, of this city, in a report made public, places $40,000,000 as a conservative estimate of the defalcations throughout the United States in 1913. Thefts of $4,000,000 were reported, while insurance policies paid because of burglaries and other evidences of loss brings the total up to the first figure. IN THE CHURCHES

MAY DEVOTIONS CLOSE.

Large Audiences in Attendance at Catholic Churches at Sunday's Services.

The May devotions closed at all the Catholic churches in the city with Sunday's services when large audiences taxed the seating capacity of the houses of worship. At the St. Patrick's church the statue of the Blessed Virgin was crowned by Miss Emma Weisman and Rev. J. F. Delaney delivered a sermon on the subject, "The Blessed Virgin Mary."

The closing of the May devotions at the Cathedral followed the services for the first communicants. Seventy children received their first holy communion at the high mass Sunday morning, and in the afternoon were enrolled in the scapular.

The class of first communicants at St. Paul's church participated in the solemn closing of the May devotions at which Father Kroll delivered an eloquent sermon on the theme, "Devotions of the Blessed Virgin."

E. A. K. Hackett spoke on "Live for Christ and His Righteousness," and A. D. Craig brought out the great work of the teacher. The singing was one of the features of the convention and Miss Lela Boggs sang a pretty solo, entitled, "Say the Right Thing."

The old officers of the township were all re-elected. Resolutions of respect were read and approved on the death of one of their fellow workers, Rev. D. W. Sanders, as follows:

"Whereas, The great and supreme Ruler of the universe has in His infinite wisdom removed from among us one of our worthy and esteemed fellow laborers, Rev. D. W. Sanders; and

"Whereas, The long and intimate relation held with him in the faithful discharge of his duties in the Eel River Township Sunday School association makes it eminently befitting that we record our appreciation of him; therefore,

"Resolved, That the wisdom and ability which he has exercised in the aid of our organization by service, contributions and counsel, will be held in grateful remembrance.

"Resolved, That the sudden removal of such a life from among our midst leaves a vacancy and a shadow that will be deeply realized by all the members and friends of this organization, and will prove a serious loss to the community and the public.

"Resolved, That with deep sympathy with the bereaved relatives of the deceased we express our hope that even so great a loss to us all may be overruled for good by Him who doeth all things well.

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of this organization; a copy printed in the local papers and a copy forwarded to the bereaved family."

Parents Arrested in Connection With Catherine Winters Case at New Castle

DR. AND MRS. W. A. WINTERS.

WINTERS CASES GO TO HIGHER COURT

Detective Abel Files Affidavit of Information at Newcastle.

SEARCH IN A SWAMP

Newcastle, Ind., June 1.—Robert H. Abel, the detective employed to investigate the disappearance of Catherine Winters, aged 9, on March 20, 1913, today filed an affidavit of information in the circuit court charging Dr. W. A. Winters and his wife and W. H. Cooper, a former roomer in the Winters home, with conspiracy to commit a felony. Similar charges pending before Mayor Watkins will be dismissed, it is said, and the case turned over to the circuit court.

Search for the body of Catherine Winters was to be resumed today in a lonely swamp on a farm four miles west of this city.

A year ago the owner of the farm found a shovel lying beside a mound of newly turned earth. He took the shovel to his home and forgot the incident.

The scene was recalled vividly to his mind when he read the story of the search of the home of Dr. William A. Winters for trace of the missing girl. He had been told that many people no longer believed that the girl had been kidnaped, but feared that she had been murdered.

Reported to Detective.

The farmer reported finding the shovel to Robert H. Abel, a private detective, who has been conducting a search for the body of the girl, and plans were arranged today by Mr. Abel and Mayor J. Leb Watkins to search in the swamp. The shovel bore the mark of the Big Four railroad for which W. R. Cooper, who has been arrested on a charge of conspiracy to commit a felony in connection with Catherine's disappearance formerly worked as a telegraph operator.

The prosecution is not placing all hopes of conviction in the discovery of bits of the child's clothing in the cellar of Catherine's home, according to Prosecuting Attorney Myers. He said there were other important facts which would be brought to light Tuesday when Dr. and Mrs. Winters are arraigned before Mayor Watkins, who acts as police magistrate here.

Mayor Watkins has been the leader in the search for Catherine Winters since her disappearance. He was named by a committee as custodian of a fund which was to be raised by moving picture entertainments and public subscriptions to prosecute the search.

Sentiment in the city is nearly equally divided. Many of the citizens are angry over the tactics employed by the detective and affirm their faith in Dr. Winters and his wife, who have been residents of the city for several years.

THREE BABES ON FIRST DAY

velopment has been retarded because their systems demanded diet of different substance and each of the three babies, examined carefully, was ill only because they had not been given the sort of food best adapted to their cases.

According to the physicians, the babies had lost weight from mal-nutrition in mild degree and they had been fed on condensed milk when they really needed modified cow's milk. The physicians suggested modification of the diet according to the weight of the infant.

It was the first time that Fort Wayne ever attempted to conduct a milk depot, for the purpose of aiding mothers in the proper nourishment of their offspring. The plan was conceived by Rev. Henry B. Master, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and his idea received the endorsement of the Fort Wayne Medical society and the Woman's League. The depot is to be open each day from 10:30 till 11:30 in the morning. Two physicians and a nurse will be on hand to take care of the babies and free milk will be given to those who cannot afford to pay for it.

Each of the three infants prescribed for at the first session had at different times been in critical condition. The first was a nine and one-half month-old girl who weighed 16 pounds; the second was a five-month-old boy weighing 13 pounds and one ounce and the third infant was a five-month-old girl weighing 12 pounds and nine ounces.

The establishment of the milk depot at the First church is regarded as one of the best steps in co-operation with the better baby movement that has been started throughout this country. Mothers in every walk of life are asked to bring their children to the church where they will be examined by competent and well known physicians, their conditions will be diagnosed and the proper diets prescribed. Certified milk if needed will be supplied and in this manner those interested in the proposition, hope to aid every mother and save the lives of many babies in Fort Wayne who would possibly die because of lack of proper feeding.

Physicians and nurses will be on hand promptly at 10:30 o'clock each morning and the parents of ailing children are cordially invited to accept the aid offered.

after the commissioners had turned him down that he would appeal to the circuit court for a reversal of the decision of the commissioners. If he does this he will encounter a stiff fight. The word is out to suppress the Hiser joint. With its passing next Friday the only licensed drinking place in Washington township will have ceased to exist.

Cases against Hiser for violations of the law are pending in the circuit court, based on evidence collected by the raid Sheriff Gladieux conducted a few weeks ago.

Ninth Warders Were on Hand.

A large crowd of people from the Ninth ward were on hand when the commissioners' court went into session Monday morning to consider liquor licenses. By far the larger part of them were persons who had been leading the fight against granting a license to John Gutermuth, but there were a number of liquor dealers in that ward who were interested in the future of their business.

Gutermuth cleared the atmosphere by withdrawing his petition and the sensational battle was over. The commissioners were prepared to refuse a license to Gutermuth, but even in that event he could have taken an appeal and kept the fight going. The temperance workers in the Ninth ward announced that in the event Gutermuth had secured a license the fight would have been reopened and a blanket remonstrance to wipe the saloons from the entire ward would have been the sequel.

The fight was started by Charles Shoenfeldt, near whose home Gutermuth proposed to open a saloon. He gained support on all hands and it was only when the anti-saloon workers were assured by the commissioners that no license would be granted and by the two local breweries that no more saloons would be opened in the Ninth ward that the remonstrants withheld their big remonstrance.

Other Licenses Disposed Of.

The commissioners disposed of many other applications for liquor licenses as follows:

to an armistice with Huerta and will come here prepared to discuss internal as well as external phases of the situation.

That the United States might insist that the proceedings be delayed until Carranza had been given an opportunity to change his attitude toward the conference was a suggestion heard before today's "conversation" was begun. It was recalled today that the rules of the Hague convention do not require that hostilities shall cease pending mediation proceedings.

Get Long Cipher Message.

The American delegates were delayed in reaching the Canadian side by the receipt of a long cipher message from Washington in relation to Constitutionalist representation. The American delegates it was reported would await the decision of the mediators on this point before delivering the Washington government's answer to the essentials of the peace plan previously outlined.

The Mexican delegates also received a long message today from their government in which Gen. Huerta was understood to give his views on proposals already made and to have added other suggestions. These may be in the form of counter propositions. The Mexican delegates had reported to Mexico City the situation brought about by the injection of the constitutionalist phase of the negoiations.

INQUIRY WILL BE SEARCHING

British and Canadian Governments to Probe River Disaster.

ROYAL COMMISSION WITH WIDE POWERS

Identification of Dead is Now Proceeding More Rapidly.

Ottawa, June 1.—The British and Canadian governments are co-operating to make a most thorough investigation into the sinking of the steamer Empress of Ireland. The disaster will be inquired into by a royal commission of three.

The British government has appointed George Vaux as its representative. He has already sailed from England and will reach Montreal June 8 when the inquiry will be started. The other two members of the commission will be judges of the Canadian admiralty court. While the committee is organizing Captain Lindsey, the wreck commissioner of the government, is carrying on a preliminary investigation preparing evidence and getting the case ready as far as possible.

Passengers to Testify.

All the passengers who were saved will be summoned to give evidence before Captain Lindsey and members of the crews of the Empress and of the boat which sank her to the bottom will be examined. The royal commission will report on what measures should be taken to make navigation in the narrow waters of the St. Lawrence more secure and whether there should be a revision of the rules which now govern shipping traffic in that river.

It is expected that a set of drastic rules will be prepared and that they will be thoroughly enforced.

..LIKE GREAT CAN-OPENER.

Sharp Point of Anchor Projected From Collier's Bow.

Montreal, June 1.—The sharp point of an anchor projecting from the twisted bow of the Norwegian collier Storstad may explain why that vessel did such terrible execution when she rammed the "Empress of Ireland" early last Friday morning in the lower St. Lawrence.

An examination of the collier's shattered plates revealed the anchor jammed in a position where it could have ripped through the hull of the Empress like a great can-opener. The anchor point and portions of the battered steel surrounding bore stains of blood.

Preparations were begun here today for the inquiry into the disaster, which cost at present reckoning 969 lives. The inquiry will be conducted by a joint commission of Canadian and British shipping experts. The arrangements for the inquiry, which will be held either here or in Quebec, are being made by Captain Lindsey, Dominion wreck commissioner.

Pilot Nault's Story.

GOMPERS TAKES RAP AT PASTOR

Criticizes Cleveland Man for Sermons Defending Rockefeller.

CAUSTIC IN ATTACK

Cleveland, O., June 1.—Samuel Gompers president of the American Federation of Labor, is in Cleveland to aid the school teachers who are striving to form a labor union in opposition to the wishes of the board of education today attacked Rev. W. W. Bustard for his sermons preached Sunday evening in defense of the attitude of John D. Rockefeller in the Colorado mine strike. Bustard is pastor of Euclid Avenue Baptist church of which Rockefeller is a member and Sunday school superintendent.

Bustard declared in his sermon that complete unionization of the miners was the cause of the upheaval and that less than a third of the miners belonged to a union.

"His whole sermon showed mental bias," said Gompers. "Rev. Dr. Bustard said: "'And then what did the miners do?—they shot the guards and the guards shot the miners.' Why didn't he say the guards shot the miners first? He says the miners brought with them to this country all the pent up hatred and ignorance of foreign countries. If that is true, it is all the more true that the mine companies, their agents and representatives have induced this immigration to fill the places of American miners who can't work under the present conditions. The fact that Dr. Bustard admits that 'wages are too low and working conditions beastly' is the indictment against the companies' beastliness and tyranny and a refutation of the attempted apology and whitewash.

"The Ministerial associations are nothing more or less than a union of professional theologians."

Question of Admission to Mediation Conference Yet Undecided.

Constitutionalists Must Conform to Demands to Secure Recognition.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 1.—After a two hour conference between the mediators and the American delegates today the question of admitting the Constitutionalists into the negotiations for the settlement of the Mexican problem was still undecided. It was learned however, that the desire of the United States to have the Constitutionalists heard before a final agreement is signed here has impressed the three mediators and they are taking a more favorable view of it.

Lamar Issues Statement.

After today's conference Justice Lamar dictated the following statement: "We had a conference this morning, in which we continued a discussion of points on which we had not agreed on Saturday. The matter is still under discussion but we found in our talk this morning that we were not so far apart in our construction of certain phases, and we are still quite hopeful."

The mediators have taken the position that they will admit the Constitutionalists if they are ready to agree

SUIT AGAINST HODGES CALLED

Kansas Governor Defending Against Woman's Claim for Damages.

SAYS HE STRUCK HER

Topeka, Kan., June 1.—The suit of Mrs. Luella West against Governor George H. Hodges for $2,315 damages, based on an alleged attack in the governor's office, when it is charged Governor Hodges struck the woman as she sought to carry copies of letters from his private office, was called in the Shawnee county circuit court here today.

Mrs. West came here from her home in Wichita to urge a parole for Arthur Sullivan, a convict. Governor Hodges refused to grant the parole and Mrs. West and a woman companion sought to obtain copies of letters on which the governor based his decision. When the governor refused the request for the letters Mrs. West seized them and, it is charged, the governor then struck Mrs. West and wrenched her wrist in attempting to regain the papers. All of the charges are denied by the governor.

Warvelle, past grand high priest of Illinois, and at present the grand secretary of the grand chapter of Illinois, and a thirty-third degree Scottish Rite Mason. Another guest of note was Captain Charles Carland, of the Chicago life savings department, who with his men came to Fort Wayne during the 1913 floods and removed thirty-five children from the submerged Allen county orphanage.

Total registration showed 173 from Chicago; 157 from Fort Wayne and twenty-five from other chapters who are residents of Fort Wayne. Among other registrations were the following:

New York, June 1. John D. Rockefeller and his son, John D. Rockefeller, jr., attended services at the Calvary Baptist church yesterday for the first time since Industrial Workers and socialists, under the leadership of Upton Sinclair, commenced to annoy them two months ago. The elder Mr. Rockefeller motored to the church from his home at Tarrytown, while his son walked from his house in West Fifty-fourth street. The guard of police and detectives was slightly larger because of the presence at the church of the Rockefellers. No disturbances occurred to mark their presence.

HISER JOINT IS WIPED OUT

Commissioners Refuse a License for Notorious Roadhouse.

NINTH WARDERS WIN BIG BATTLE

John Gutermuth Withdraws Petition for License on Spring Street.

The board of county commissioners [illegible] put the notorious roadhouse [illegible]e Hiser, northwest of the city [illegible] Goshen road, out of business and this vicious den will cease from troubling the community next Friday, when its license expires.

At the same time the anti-saloon war in the Ninth ward came to an end when John Gutermuth withdrew his petition to purchase the license of Charles Miller, 1717 Lafayette street, and transfer it to Spring street, where his proposal to open a saloon started the strenuous fight that came near resulting in making the Ninth ward dry.

Hiser Place Doomed.

George Hiser's roadhouse just outside the city limits has been an eyesore to Fort Wayne for many years. It has been the scene of countless orgies and the foregathering place of lewd women and tough men who went there to practice excesses that were not tolerated in the city even in the palmiest days of the wide-open town. The commissioners had marked the Hiser joint for extinction and he knew it. The place was raided one Saturday night a few weeks ago by Sheriff A. C. Gladieux and his deputies and Hiser realied that he could get no license.

Application was made for a license by Henry Trobenbach. When he appeared Monday morning for hearing on his application Messrs. Butt, Schwier and Black of the board of commissioners turned him down cold. He was held to be an unfit man to engage in the saloon business and he got the shortest shrift ever given an applicant in the commissioners' court. Trobenbach announced told him that Anderson, his first officer, and Pilot Lechance, who brought the Storstad from Father Point to Quebec, were on the bridge at the time of the collision. "On the way up the river," continued Nault, "an examination was made to ascertain the extent of the damage to the Storstad. As far as we could learn only plates forward had been sprung, but aft the ship was undamaged. At Quebec the Storstad took in so much water that we were obliged to flood the aft compartments in order to keep the ships bow up. There was no water in the hold of the Storstad.

Anderson Deeply Grieved.

"Captain Anderson is deeply grieved over the tragedy. Several times during the trip from Quebec I came upon him crying with his face buried in his hands. Captain Anderson told me he had been instructed not to talk about the accident."

One of the officers of the Storstad said today: "At the time of the disaster I was lying in my bunk. I was awakened by a shock and at first thought the ship had struck a rock. I ran to the deck and looked over the side; the Storstad was going full speed astern. The water around was filled with struggling men and women shouting for help. Boats were immediately lowered and there was not a man on the Storstad who did not do his utmost to rescue the people in the water. We, in the boats, brought the survivors to the deck of the Storstad. From there they were taken into the engine room, the warmest place on the ship. Some of the survivors had been so numbed by the ice cold water that they leaned up against the cylinders of the engines and their flesh was blistered.

There was no change today in the official lists of saved and dead, which show that 418 persons escaped and 969 were killed or drowned.

Captain Anderson issued a statement last night in which he denied responsibility for the wreck. He says he had the right of way and that when he lost the Empress of Ireland in the fog she had changed her course.

The Storstad's course remained unaltered but when the Empress was next seen she was close at hand, but making considerable headway.

It is declared that the Storstad's engines were reversed and that the momentum was nearly checked when the vessels came together. As for the charge that the Storstad backed out of hole she made in the Empress, the statement says it was not true that the engines were ordered ahead so that the vessel might be held together, but that the Empress swerved to one side forcing the bow of the collier to the port side.

Shaughnessy in Statement.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, head of the Canadian Pacific railroad, issued a statement today thanking the people of Romouski and vicinity for the care and attention they gave to the living and the dead that came to them from the company's ill-fated steamer, Empress of Ireland.

Commander Tweedie, of his majesty's ship Essex, which has been abiding in the search for the bodies, said today that he believed it would be impossible to salvage the Empress of Ireland. He expressed the belief that the hull of the Empress will have to blown up with dynamite to prevent it becoming a menace to navigation. The services of divers from the Essex have been offered to the owners of the Empress. The divers may be used in an effort to recover a part of the valuable cargo and the bodies of some hundreds of persons now believed to b locked in sunken hull.

Irving's Body Found.

The body of Laurence Irving, the English actor, was picked up last night on the west bank of the St. Lawrence, below Romouski. This information reached Quebec today and was given out at the office of the Canadian Pacific railway. Irving's face was bruised almost beyond recognition. A signet ring with the initials "L. I." on one of his fingers, led to the identification. One hand still clutched a piece of cambric, probably torn from the night dress of his wife, whom he was making desperate efforts to save when they were last seen alive.

Capt. F. X. Pouliot, of the government steamer Lady Evelyn, reported today that he recovered the log book of the Empress of Ireland late Friday night while searching for bodies. The book was found in a water-tight metal box.

IDENTIFYING THE DEAD.

Work at Quebec Is Progressing Quite Rapidly.

Quebec, June 1.—Identification of the dead recovered from the scene of the wrecked steamer Empress of Ireland is proceeding more rapidly than was expected. Nearly 100 of the bodies brought here yesterday by the tender Lady Grey have thus far been recognized by sorrowing friends and relatives. This is in addition to the eighteen bodies identified and claimed at Rimouski.

Some of the identifications include persons of prominence who lost their lives in the collision between the Empress and the Storstad early Friday. They are Sir Henry Seton-Karr, the big game hunter; Dr. E. A. Barlow, a leading geologist of Canada, and Mrs. W. Leonard Palmer, wife of a London newspaper man. Nearly a score of members of the Salvation Army have been identified among the dead. The funeral ship Lady Grey escorted by the British steamer Essex arrived in Quebec early Sunday morning and soon thereafter Bluejackets carried the bodies ashore. The pier shed was heavily draped in black and over the windows sheets were fastened to shut out the curious and the morbid.

On the wharf, as the ship docked, a number of officials, newspaper men and photographers were gathered. Among the disappointed ones when the people were admitted to view the bodies in the funeral shed was H. Lurton, a Norwegian. He and his wife were on a visit to their old home. His wife was torn from his grasp when the Empress of Ireland went down and they searched for her a long time as he swam near the wreck, but he could not find her. He was saved, but this is a matter of regret to him, now that his wife is dead.

Little White Caskets.

A section in the shed that caused deep sorrow to those who visited it was that in which twenty-five little white caskets lay. These contained the bodies of babies and little children. Person after person turned away crying from this sad collection.

Several bodies of the dead were badly gashed, probably killed in their berths by the force of the Storstad's bow as it crushed into the Empress of Ireland's side, while nearly all were bruised and battered from contact with debris. Additional bodies are being recovered, but slowly, at the scene of the disaster, reports from Rimouski and Matane say. A force of men is patrolling both sides of the river, but so far with little success. Boats are hovering over the river with the same purpose in view.

SEARCH FOR THE DEAD.

Tugs and Launches at Spot Where Empress of Ireland Sank.

Rimouski, June 1.—Several tugs and launches chartered by the Canadian Pacific Railway company today began a systematic search of the St. Lawrence river in an effort to recover more of the Empress of Ireland's dead.

One or more launches remained directly over the spot where the shattered hull lies three miles off shore waiting for the bodies of some of the victims to come to the surface of the water. Two of the lost liner's life boats were found floating down stream today. They were empty.

HE WAS HEADING NEW REVOLUTION

Gen. Bliss Reports Arrest of Quevado and His Followers.

GERMAN SHIPS FINED

Washington, June 1.—Brigadier General Bliss reported to the war department today the arrest of Quevado and his followers at El Paso yesterday. It is understood that Quevado was heading a new counter revolution in Chihuahua. He will be sent to Fort Wingate, N. M., with other Mexican refugees. Quevado was in the Huerta army which surrendered at Presidio, Texas, but escaped at the time.

The Brazilian minister in Mexico City informed the state department today that Gregario Alcaraz, servant of Captain Rush of the battleship Florida, who went through the Mexican lines, now is being held in the military prison in Mexico City. The minister is seeking his release. At the instance of the Brazilian minister the Huerta government is investigating a report that William Sims an American, was executed at Salina Cruz, May 16.

Secretary Garrison made an official statement today of the status of the cases of the German ships Ypiranga and Bavaria, which landed munitions of war for Huerta at Puerto Mexico and were fined more than one million pesos by American officials at Vera Cruz. Gen. Funston reported that the ship's agents had arranged bonds. The secretary's statement follows:

"The customs and port officials fined the Hamburg-American liner Bavaria 118,685 pesos for having discharged a large portion of her cargo, consigned to Vera Cruz, at another port before arriving at the port of Vera Cruz, and for correcting her manifest after arrival in the port of Vera Cruz.

"A similar fine has been imposed upon the Ypiranga, amounting to 894,950 pesos for failure to correct invoices accordingly, and discharging her cargo at a port other than that to which consigned. Gen. Funston states that the officers in question had no option under the Mexican law and had to assess the fines in the sums named. No appeal has been taken on behalf of the vessels and the presumption is that if nay, further proceedings are to be had representations will be made to our state department."

Concerning sanitary conditions at Veera Cruz Secretary Garrison today said: "The United States army has completed one month's occupation of Vera Cruz. There have been ashore more than 7,000 soldiers and marines and not one death from disease has occurred within that period."

SEEKS $10,000 FOR INJURIES

Cecil Roebuck Sues Fred H. Meyers, Blaming Him for Bad Lift.

NEWS OF THE COURTS

Charging that it was the fault of the defendant that an elevator on which he was riding with a load of sawdust was in bad condition and broke with its burden, causing him permanent injuries, Cecil Roebuck has commenced suit in the superior court against Fred H. Meyers for $10,000, the complaint charging negligence. The accident occurred December 19, 1913, at the livery barn operated by the defendant on Washington boulevard west. The complaint alleges that the elevator was out of condition and its cable worn and weak, facts it is charged the defendant knew. The elevator, with the plaintiff and a load of sawdust he was taking to the second floor of the stable, where he was an employe, were shot against the supporting beam and the cable parted. Roebuck fell to the first floor and received injuries to one of his legs that he alleges are permanent.

Wants a Limited Divorce.

A suit for separation from bed and board and $2,000 alimony has been filed in the superior court by Belle Eggimann against Peter Eggimann. She alleges they were married in August, 1887, and separated the 20th of May, 1914. They have four children, one 26, one 19 and two 14 years of age. Of the minor children the wife asks custody. She charges failure to provide and habitual cruelty, stating that the defendant will go for weeks without speaking to her, showing her any affection or displaying and anxiety to promote her happiness, and that while her husband is employed at a salary of $80 to $90 a month as a chief clerk for the Nickel Plate railroad, she has been compelled to go out and work at cleaning offices to get money to clothe herself. He refuses her the privileges of recreation, she says, will go no place with her and furnishes no money for any purpose except to supply the table, and that grudgingly, denying her money to clothe the children. A home valued at $2,500 and owned jointly, she says, was purchased mainly with money to which she fell heir. She wants a limited separation and $2,000 allowance.

Uncertainty as to County's Legal Position Holds Up Board.

THE MUNICIPAL NEWS

On advice of City Attorney Colerick the board of works Monday again postponed the awarding of the contract for the construction of the retaining wall on Spy Run avenue north of the State street bridge to the Centlivre brewery. Uncertainty as to the legal position of Allen county, which has appropriated $5,000 for its part of the work, has constrained the postponement. It may yet be necessary for the county to advertise for bids for the construction of its part of the work. The city attorney and County Attorney Hoffman are examining the law.

A gang of men will be put to work excavating at the place of the cave-in Tuesday morning. It will be a big and dangerous task for it will be necessary to go down some thirty-five or forty feet to get to the seat of the trouble.

Good Program by Elks' Band at Swinney Park Tuesday Night.

The first of the summer-long series of concerts to be held in the eight public parks of Fort Wayne this year will be given at Swinney park Tuesday evening by the Elks' band under the direction of Prof. John L. Verweire. The program will probably be given from the new municipal band wagon constructed according to plans furnished by the park board. While Swinney park has a bandstand and will have a new and better one before long, the new wagon will be given an inauguration. It will be used regularly in other parks, which are not yet equipped with bandstands. The city council last year provided for a special levy that will produce enough money to pay for five concerts in each of the eighth parks. The program for Tuesday night's inaugural concert is as follows, beginning at 8 o'clock:

1. March—"Col. Gross".....H. Clarke
2. Overture—"Peter Schmoll".....Weber
3. Selected—"Little Boy Blue"....Bereny
4. Bacarole Waltz "On Melodies of the Tales of Hoffman".....Offenbach
5. Gems from the New York Hippodrome Production, "America".....Klein
6. Idyl—"Canoeing".....A. Pryor
7. Selection from "Madame Butterfly" .....Puccini
8. Waltz—"Sphinx" .....Dan Godfrey
9. Popular melodies from the comedy, "The Firefly".....Friml
10. March—"U. S. Service"....Hermandez

This program is made up to suit all classes of people without resorting to the trashy kind of music.

SIMMS SEES SAFE SENATE MAJORITY

Repeal of Canal Tolls Exemption Will Have 52 Votes, He Says.

LABOR GROUP ACTIVE

Washington, June 1.—After a conference today between leaders of the fight to pass the Panama tolls exemption bill, Senator Simms predicted that the measure would get the votes of fifty-two senators, a safe majority. Senator Simmons declared his line up did not include any senator considered doubtful. So far no attempt has been made to sound out sentiment on various amendments or to discover if an arbitration resolution can pass.

Voting on Amendments.

Today was counted on as a field day for labor in the house. With a continuation of the consideration of the Clayton omnimus anti-trust bill and an order to immediately begin voting upon the amendments which the labor unions want tacked onto the bill, the American Federation of Labor officials were watching with great interest what the house would do. Representatives Kitchin, North Carolina; Henry, of Texas, chairman of the rules committee; Keating, of Colorado; Buchanan, of Illinois, and others of the so-called labor group in the house, were ready to fight for the labor amendments, if necessary, although counting upon easy adoption of them.

Representative Webb presented the first committee amendment, providing that no labor or farmers' organization should be held to be a combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade, which, after ten hours' discussion, was adopted. On a rising vote, 207 members, all that were present, voted to write the amendment into the bill.

Delays the Resolution.

By a vote of 33 to 20 the senate today referred to the interstate commerce committee the Norris resolution asking the attorney general to state if the New York Central lines constitute a combination in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law and if he intends to proceed against it.

The order sending the resolution to the interstate commerce committee is to delay the resolution.

Other senators, some of the democrats, objected to calling up the attorney general to disclose his intentions in a matter which might later be the subject of litigation.

"WHERE FORT WAYNE GETS HER GLASSES"

FREE RIDES FASHIONABLE IN TOLEDO'S NOVEL STREET CAR WAR.

BY JUDSON KING.
(Secretary of National Popular Government League)

Toledo, O., June 1.—The Toledo street car company, with its franchises expired, flatly refuses to obey a 3-cent ordinance and is carrying passengers free—unless they voluntarily pay 5 cents.

Outstripping in spectacular features either that of Cleveland or Detroit, the street-car war begun 15 years ago by the famous mayor, "Golden Rule" Jones, is rapidly nearing a climax which will make history.

Mayor Carl F. Keller and the city council, standing pat on their platform and written personal pledges, demand a 3-cent fare. The company declares a 3-cent fare impossible, but agrees, under certain conditions, to try the scheme for a year.

About two-thirds of the people, just to show they are too good sports to hit even a down-and-out street car company, pay the nickel with a grin.

But don't imagine they are being horns-swaggled. They know the company is well aware its chances for a franchise would go glimmering if it dare throw them off the cars—municipal ownership would come in a hurry.

Henry L. Doherty & Co., of Wall street, New York, recently took over the company—the "Big Con"—after it had repeatedly failed to land a franchise. Henry L., in his own genial, proper person, is one of the most astute and able public-utility promoters in the United States. His companies own properties in 176 cities. He claims never to have been whipped in a franchise fight and is personally on the job in Toledo.

Clearly Henry is up against the fight of his life. He is in the ring with the people who have for eight successive elections licked a powerful street-car corporation managed by one of the smoothest politicians Ohio ever produced—Walter Brown.

On the other hand, with a property stocked and bonded to $31,000,000 on a $7,000,000 physical valuation, he can't grant 3-cent fares and pay dividends to his stockholders. Besides, a 3-cent franchise would be bad precedent. other cities would demand it. To allow municipal ownership would be worse still. All street-car magnates are praying for Henry.

Doherty believes in private ownership. He told me the post-office should be run by a private corporation, and even the public roads. The public schools he would retain as a part of the public power of the state.

He affects, however, to belong to a "new school" public-utility men, who are square with the public. He ignores "politicians"—at least the Toledo kind—and plays to the people. He mixes, addresses meetings, buys space in the papers to instruct them and invites criticism.

He admits it is a hard job to deal with folks educated by "Golden Rule" Jones and Tom Johnson. To all arguments they reply—3-cent fares! If he says it is impossible they tell him to "squeeze out the water" and it will be. If he mentions "innocent purchasers" they decline to be responsible and remind him that several thousand "widows and orphans" in Toledo are interested in 3-cent fares.

It just missed them by a narrow margin, but stunned them badly and for a time they were unable to realize their narrow escape. WIFE'S RIGHT TO NAME BABY.

Judge Rules That the Husband Has Nothing to Do With It.

Los Angeles, June 1.—Judge Charles Monroe, in superior court, has rendered a decision that a wife has absolute authority in the naming of children. The husband has nothing to do with it.

The ruling was made in the case of Chyrstoe Malamatinos, a Greek, who insisted that his baby daughter be named for Helen of Troy.

His wife, an American, insisted on Muriel, and the court sustained her choice and ordered Malamatinos to pay the family $5 a week.

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

Acts 5:1-16.

1 But a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession,

2 And kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

3 But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land?

4 Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.

5 And Ananias hearing these words fell down, and gave up the ghost and great fear came on all them that heard these things.

6 And the young men arose, wound him up, and carried him out, and buried him.

7 And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in

8 And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much.

9 Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out.

10 Then fell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost: and the young men came in, and found her dead, and, carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

11 And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things.

12 And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; (and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch.

13 And of the rest durst no man join himself to them: but the people magnified them.

14 And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women.)

15 Insomuch that they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them.

16 There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed every one.

Growth of a Great Industry

Government reports show there has been a remarkable increase in the production of cement in this country since 1895. In that year fewer than 1,000,000 barrels were produced, while last year, 1913, the grand total was 92,400,000 barrels. Scarcely a building of any sort is today erected without the use of cement, and while a tremendous increase in the use of the product has been fully realized, the figures above are likely to be staggering. It is interesting to note, also, that Indiana is playing a very large part in furnishing the tremendous supply now utilized.

There are so many uses for cement today that it is practically impossible to list them. The popularity of cement as a building material continues to increase, and for certain paving purposes, because of its cheapness and durability, it promises to remain unrivaled. Cement today enters into the manufacture of everything from buildings and bridges to telegraph poles and sewer pipes, and has come to be recognized as the most sanitary and lasting material that can be manufactured at a reasonable price. Notwithstanding the rapid increase in the demand for cement, as its uses have multiplied, this is one material which has played no part in the high cost of living problem. As a matter of fact, the consumer today is paying approximately one-half the price per barrel paid in 1895. The quality of the product, nevertheless, is better than ever before.

Engineers have developed the use of cement to a point where it is now possible to erect a practically indestructible skyscraper of this material, and cement buildings are going up in large cities in all parts of the country. Brick and stone pavements are rapidly being displaced by those of cement, because the latter pavement is sanitary, cheaper and more durable. Experiments are being made in various sections of the country in the construction of cement roads, and on the farm hundreds of uses have been found. The cements used by the governments in its numerous operations, including the construction of the Panama canal and the large irrigation dams built by the United States reclamation service in the west, are all tested carefully by the United States bureau of standards.

Before leaving for Spain to attend the wedding of his son, Colonel Roosevelt issued a statement in which he declared that in neither the tariff bill nor the new currency law has the democratic administration competently responded to governmental needs of the country, and speaking generally, things are all out of joint. Somehow we had an impression that the Wilson administration is one of the things with which the strenuous colonel would refrain from declaring himself dee-lighted.

White slavers who attempt to ply their nefarious vocation in Indiana may possibly draw an impressive lesson from the experience of Harry Kimble, before Judge Anderson in the federal court at Indianapolis. Kimble admitted his guilt, and five years in the federal prison at Stillwater, Minn., is the penalty he will pay for his transgression of the law.

President Wilson sent from the White House conservatories a bouquet of flowers for the tomb of General Lawton on Decoration day. The government has not yet seen fit to erect a monument at the grave of the Indiana hero—a neglect that seems shameful when one recalls General Lawton's conspicuous services for his country.

MISSOURI JUSTICE.

(Pittsburg Dispatch.)

Once more the Missouri courts have declared their unshaken determination to uphold the letter of the law, even if commonsense and justice totter. The famous comma case and the controversy over the precise legal distinction between shooting a man in the head or the body were former examples, but neither eclipsed the latest ruling at Macon. A St. Louis man convicted of picking a conductor's pocket at Moberly and whose punishment was fixed by the jury at two years in the penitentiary has been granted a new trial because of a wrong word in an instruction. The instruction defined larceny as the wrongful or fraudulent stealing, taking or carrying away. The court held that the conjunction "and" should have been used instead of "or." The accused had been tried three times.

It would be interesting to know if the court really believed the use of "and" instead of "or" in that definition would have had the slightest effect on the jury's verdict. It may be interesting to the legal pundits to worry over the exact difference which the use of the words makes or implies in that connection, but to the lay mind it seems profitless discussion. The real error, to the non-professional mind, in this instance would seem to be the complicating and confusing legal terminology which caused the judicial slip, and which is so characteristic of legal phraseology in courts and documents.

When the case reaches the Missouri supreme court, which it probably will, that learned body may elucidate the puzzling point whether a jury that believed a man guilty of wrongful or fraudulent stealing, taking or carrying away could have any reasonable doubt as to his equal guilt of wrongful and fraudulent stealing, taking and carrying away.

Laurier Urges Probe Into Ship Disaster

Sir Wilfred Laurier

Sir William Laurier, former premier of Canada, and now leader of the opposition in the Dominion's parliament, brings to attention the fact that the sinking of the "Empress of Ireland" is the third catastrophe of its kind on the St. Lawrence route since navigation opened two months ago. He demands immediate investigation, with a view of obtaining more stringent maritime regulations.

USES BEE STING FOR RHEUMATISM

California Man Found a Remedy Drastic But Efficacious.

LAUDS THE BEE STING

Long Beach, Cal., June 1.—Wm. Frank is now entirely free from rheumatism he contracted while fighting for the United States in the Philippines in the Spanish-American war. Frank resorted to the bee-sting cure. He was attacked by a swarm of bees that numbered at least 1,000.

WILLIAM FRANK.

Frank was very low for a time as a result of the stings. He was unconscious for hours, and Dr. W. H. Smith, of the Long Beach sanatorium worked over him for an hour and a half before he brought him out of danger. When Frank recovered he and Mrs. Frank picked out eighty-five stings that the bees had left in his hands and legs.

A week or so after his recovery, Frank realized that he was no longer bothered by rheumatic pains.

If his rheumatism ever returns, Frank states he will again resort to the bee cure, although he will not take such a severe treatment as before.

"Fifteen or twenty bee stings," says Frank, "will cure the severest form of rheumatism."

Frank is now able to lift his legs up in front of him, throw his arms about in any direction and indulge in any kind of muscular effort—something he could not do before he took the bee cure.

It has also been decided to hold the celebration on the large campus north of the college buildings. In case of rain, the crowds will be housed in the gymnasium, the college buildings and auditorium and in Concordia Lutheran church on Allgeier street. The next meeting of the board will be held Wednesday night at which time sub-committees are to be appointed.

FRED LEWIS WILL RECOVER.

Motorcyclist Struck by Interurban Car Shows Improvement.

Attendants at the hospital states that the condition of Fred Clarence Lewis, the young man who had his right leg amputated above the ankle following an accident Sunday afternoon at 12:40 o'clock when a Bluffton interurban struck him, is somewhat improved and that there is hope for his recovery.

Lewis, who is 22 years of age, and is employed at the Fort Wayne Electric works, was coming to Fort Wayne on his motorcycle following a visit to his home in Arcola. When he reached a point six miles south of the city on the Bluffton road, it is supposed that his engine went wrong and he could not control it.

The unfortunate youth drove his motorcycle onto the crosing and the insterurban which, according to witnesses, had given the usual signs for a crossing, crashed into him, throwing him to the side of the road, where he was picked up in an unconscious condition and removed to the St. Joseph hospital, where it was found necessary to remove the foot. Dr. James M. Dinnen performed the operation.

The car which struck the injured youth was in charge of Motorman VanDine and Conductor Hunt. They picked up the boy and rushed him to the hospital and took the remains of the motorcycle to the interurban traction terminal.

IS SLOWLY IMPROVING.

Samuel Hart, who underwent an operation Sunday morning for the amputation of his left limb, is steadily improving at the St. Joe hospital. Hart is the aged man who was shot while attempting to steal some chickens from a man's roost on the evening of May 4. Blood poison set in and it was thought that there was no hope for his recovery, but since the operation he is continuing to get better.

JESS FELGER IS PEACE WRECKER

Breaks Up Quiet Time that Ran Through Holiday and Sunday.

NEWS OF THE POLICE

Jess Felger, who bothers the police and the city court quite a lot, wrecked one of the quietest periods Fort Wayne has known for a good while, when he got up an early head of steam this morning and was arrested helplessly drunk and hauled in just a moment too late to get on Judge Kerr's Monday docket. It saved the docket, however, from disfigurement by a single new case. From Friday until Jess Felger's arrest the police had nothing to do in the customary line. Decoration Day Saturday and the Sunday following were distinguished by a perfect peace in Fort Wayne. Not a man was locked in a cell at police headquarters from Friday night to Monday morning.

Warrants for Saloonkeepers.

Warrants were issued this morning for Dan Clemens, proprietor of the Alt Heidelberg cafe and saloon; for H. A. Weibke, proprietor of the Hof Brau cafe and saloon, and William H. Knapp, proprietor of the Baltes hotel, cafe and saloon. The warrants were based on affidavits charging conducting a saloon contrary to law. Sunday morning about 1:30, Captain Richard Kelly and sergeant David Bloom conducted an investigation down town to ascertain if the laws were being broken. They say they found violations in progress at the bar and in the cafe at the Alt Heidelberg, in the cafe of the Hof Brau and evidence at the Baltes that there had been drinking. Captain Kelly filed affidavits and warrants were served. The cases will be heard Tuesday morning.

Lad Tells a Good Story.

Young Steve Pytel, aged 11 years, was a good witness for his father, Lawrence Pytel, charged with stealing lumber from the Pennsylvania railroad. With a cooler head, a finer intelligence and a greater readiness of resource than his parent the lad came close to explaining away the charge. It depends upon a witness who will be in court Tuesday and pending whose appearance the case was continued a day. Pytel, senior, gave bond and was released after being looked up three days. The boy has been certified to the juvenile court.

Other City Court Cases.

Walter Winter, a 17-year-old lad, paid $10 and costs for exceeding the speed limit with his motorcycle on Spy Run avenue. He was "clocked" by Motorcycle Officer Dan Kintz, who previously had warned him to slow up. Winter pleaded that the motorcycle refused to be controlled.

Walter Hans paid $5 and costs for driving his automoblie past a street car that was standing at theintersection of Calhoun and Wayne streets to receive and discharge passengers. The young man displayed engaging frankness in admitting the offense, in approving the action of Officer Major, who arrested him, in admitting his knowledge of the laws and ordinances and in aggreeing that he should be penalized. He merely claimed by privilege to state that he was not driving recklessly, that he did not commit the infraction designedly and that his engrossment in a business conversation with a companion led to the violation.

The case against Frase Fyke charged with stealing a bundle of newspapers of the value of 14 cents from a newstand, was certified to the juvenile court, the lad being but 14 years old.

The case against Melville Denny for violating a city ordinance in having obstructed an alley, was continued indefinitely, it being shown that the obstructions had been removed.

William Miller and Bernard Boehm, charged with drunkenness, were released after being held from Saturday.

DR. ADAMS PROVES ALIBI

Dr. J. H. Adams, a widely known dentist with offices down town and a residence on Annie avenue, near Parnell avenue, appeared persona propria before Detective Sergeant Peter Junk to establish an alibi to the charge that he had been drowned in Toledo, Ohio, Saturday. Detective Junk surveyed Dr. Adams, laboring with sweaty vigor in his kitchen garden and admitted that the alibi was good. The officer had gone to the Adams home to notify Mrs. Adams of her husband's death. He didn't tell her. The police department got a message from Toledo stating that John Adams or J. K. Clark, a dentist, had been drowned there and asking that "Jack" Nickell, a cousin in this city, be notified. Dr. Adams, of Fort Wayne, is a nephew of "Jack" Nickell, and hence arose the confusion.

FRED STOLL DIES FROM CHLOROFROM

WAS SECOND ATTEMPT

Fred Stoll, aged sixty-eight years, a wealthy property owner living at 121 Esmond street, made a second and successful attempt to end his own life late Saturday afternoon, when in the absence of his wife, he saturated a cloth with chloroform and placed it over his nostrils. Differences with his wife, it is said, led the aged man to suicide.

Only a few weeks ago he filed a sensational divorce suit in the Allen county courts and among other things, charged that his wife was attempting to induce him to dispose of all of his property and cash. Later he succeeded in having the suit withdrawn.

Two weeks ago Mr. Stoll attempted to commit suicide by the chloroform route, but was prevented by his wife. Mrs. Stoll left the house Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock and says her husband appeared in a cheerful disposition. She returned at 5:30 and found his lifeless body lying upon a bed. Beside him were two letters, one addressed to three sons and the other to Charles Hoffman, of South Calhoun street, a brother-in-law.

Coroner E. H. Kruse was summoned and after an examination expressed a belief that the aged man had died at least fifteen or twenty minutes after having placed the drug to his nostrils. The man's face was badly blistered by the deadly fumes.

Mr. Stoll had been employed at the Packard company's plant for two years. Surviving besides the widow he leaves three sons, George, Fred and Charles Stoll. He also leaves one brother, Jacob Stoll, of Packard avenue.

Private funeral services Tuesday afternoon from the residence. Interment at Lindenwood.

BIG STREET PARADE

Thousands of people gathered at Lindenwood cemetery Saturday afternoon, following a big street parade, and with song and speeches participated in the closing program of the city's annual observance of Decoration day. The program was a success in every particular and not a single accident marred the smoothly running schedule of holiday features.

Every military organization was largely represented in the parade and music was furnished by the Elks', Citizens' and Moose lodge bands, Concordia band and Jefferson drum corps. One of the best showing was made by the cadets of Concordia college, attired in dress uniform and moving under the command of Captain George Byroade.

Mayor William J. Hosey presided as chairman of the services at Lindenwood and addresses were delivered by Rev. H. C. Hadley and Rev. John R. Quinlan, while the chairman of the executive committee, Captain T. W. Blair, read Lincoln's Gettysburg address. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. D. H. Guild and music for the ceremonies was rendered by the Dudley Buck quartet.

For the first time in the history of Fort Wayne's Decoration Day observances, the civil war veterans did not walk in the parade. They were carried to the exercises in automobiles furnished by the following:

W. A. Davis, J. P. Johnson, William Beck, Paul Kinder, O. E. Schwartz, Edward BuBois, Dave Frosh, Hugh G. Keegan, E. F. Yarnelle, Sheriff A. C. Gladieux, Dr. Charles Rothschild, C. W. Fairfield, C. Raichter, J. S. Stark, W. A. Sheets, George K. Fox, Ohnhaus garage, Drage-Harris company, Randall Automobile company.

Adam Smith, 152 East Lieth street, was slightly injured and a bicycle he was riding was demolished when he accidentally collided with a machine driven by Clemens Beckner at the corner of Berry and Calhoun streets.

LAYS MANIA TO A BUMP ON HEAD

LIKED TO SEE BLAZE

St. Louis, June 1.—Because George W. Bernard, a cooper, 3526 Indiana avenue, was one of the first and most interested spectators at two lumber yard fires, which caused a loss of nearly $20,000, he was arrested, suspected of setting the blaze. He confessed to the police of the Wyoming street station that he started both fires, and declared he had suffered from an incendiary mania for two years, since he fell upon his head from swinging rings in the United States army gymnasium at Fort Worden, Wash.

The first fire was in the yard of the James T. Addis Wrecking company, 3315-45 Salena street, and did $4,200 damage. The second, an hour later, was at the Independent Lumber company, 3628 South Broadway, and caused a loss of $15,000.

Confession He Made to Police.

Bernard is 32 years old. His confession, which was in writing, is as follows:

"I had been drinking beer, kuemmel and whisky with friends all day. About 9 p. m., while sitting in the back yard of my home, I became seized with a sudden desire to start a fire. I left the premises, unobserved, by way of the front gate and went to a frame shed in the rear of the Addis company's plant and piled dry kindling between them and struck a match and set fire to the kindling. Then I slipped out of the yard and waited in the vicinity until the fire department arrived.

Stopped to Watch Firemen.

"Then I went to the Independent Lumber company's yard, and, going into a lumber shed there, I piled up a lot of kindling wood and placed it between piles of lumber in the shed. I lighted a match and set fire to the kindling. In a short time the place was in flames. I left the lumber yard when the fire had started and remained in the vicinity and watched the fire department fight the flames.

"When drinking I have a mania to start fires, see fire and watch the fire department work. It possesses me more than anything else after I have been drinking."

RECOVERS SEAL OF OLD SCHOOL

University Authorities Find Emblem of the King's College.

LOST FOR 125 YEARS

New York, June 1.—After having been lost to the institution for more than a century and a quarter, the original seal of King's college, out of which has grown Columbia university, has been restored to the trustees and will be exhibited on commencement day at the university in June.

Many years of search by succeeding boards of trustees and individuals interested in preserving relics of the founding of the institution failed to reveal any trace of the original seal. Several weeks ago, however, trustees of Columbia learned that since 1809 it had been in the family of George H. Parke, of Williamsport, Pa., from whom it was purchased. It was delivered to the university officers at the meeting of the trustees. It will be the center of attraction among the many historical items that link the present institution with its parent.

Only a part of the mystery regarding the manner in which the seal disappeared has been cleared. Mr. Parke explained that it had been given to him by his grandfather, dead for many years, who said he bought it in 1809 from a man who said he had been employed by the trustees of the college to engrave a new seal.

Examination of the college records showed that in 1788, immediately after the transfer of the control of the college from the regents of the university to the trustees of Columbia college, it was ordered by the trustees that a new seal be engraved by Peter Maverick, a well known engraver of that time. The new seal was to be virtually a duplicate of the older one, the only important difference being in the inscribed name of the college.

The records show also that the new seal was delivered, but there is no record of the return of the original seal. Further examination showed that Mr. Maverick was alive in 1809.

The original seal was given to the college in 1766 by George Harrison, who was deeply interested in the institution. He was vetryman of Trinity church from 1752 to 1765.

TO BUILT SECOND OVER SEA CRAFT

Rodman Wanamaker Orders Another Machine for Ocean Flight

FROM GLENN CURTISS

New York, June 1.—Rodman Wanamaker has decided to build a second aeroplane for transatlantic flight, it was announced by the constructor, Glenn H. Curtiss. New ideas as to the lines of the craft that will compete against the best that Europe can produce for the distinction of being the first to fly across the ocean will be used in the second aeroplane, on which work is already in progress at Hammondsport, N. Y.

Mr. Curtiss, who was in the city to confer with Mr. Wanamaker on the construction of the new machine, said that the work on the first flyers had been suspended, and that the second aeroplane would be first completed. It is quite possible that both will be tried, in an effort to obtain the most efficient for the attempt.

Lieutenant John C. Porte, formerly of the British navy, who is to be the aviator in the voyage from New Foundland to Ireland, it was explained, is responsible for numerous new features which are being introduced in the second machine. Just what is the nature of the changes that have been made in the design the constructor was not ready to state yesterday. He said, however, that there would be no change in the motive power, and that one of the new Curtiss engines of 200-horse power will be used to drive the new machine. Lieutenant Porte remains at Hammondsport watching the work of building the aircraft.

(By Maybelle Mortimer.)

June, the month of brides and roses, is looked forward to by thousands of girls who just now are sewing into their trousseaus all the dreams of future happiness that come to the girl about to be married.

The bridal robe this year is made of white crepe, taffeta or charmeuse, and about the hips, reaching to the knees, is a frill of princess lace. Over this is a turned-under ruffle of the silk material which is put on at the belt with an upstanding ruffle. The upper part of the waist is made of princess lace.

The June bride this June will carry a prayer book with a marker of ribbon and flowers. The bridesmaid's gown is of pink taffeta made with a narrow pleating about the skirt. The tunic is very full and hangs straight and long on one side with a bias short effect on the other. The sash is of pink taffeta with a wreath of small pink roses through the center.

A white chip hat with pink roses and black velvet ribbons, a cane and a large bunch of La France roses, pink slippers and stockings, make the pretty girl who will wear them look like rosy dawn.

The groom, who usually holds about the same relative position at the ceremony that he does in the illustration, is correctly garbed in striped gray trousers, black cutaway coat, light waistcoat and dark tie.

The "mousme" sash, with its long, graceful, floating ends and its huge bow rising high in the back, is seen on the frocks of the plainest materials.

MRS. ELLIS PROPOSES A MARRIAGE NOVITIATE.

Mrs. Havelock Ellis

(By Nixola Greeley-Smith)

Mrs. Havelock Ellis, one of the foremosts fenminists of the world, has just arrived in the United States to deliver a series or lectures on the woman movement which will take her ultimately through the south and west.

Mrs. Ellis, author of "Kits-Woman," "Three Modern Seers" and "The Imperishable Wing," is very incidentally the wife of the famous investigator of "The Psychology of Sex." She has been married to Havelock Ellis for twenty-three years and the union of these celebrated persons is regarded by those who know them as the strongest possible argument for the permanence of romantic love.

An interesting detail of their domestic life is that Mrs. Ellis has a cottage of her own in Cornwall while Mr. Ellis maintains a flat for himself in London, so that the most of the devoted married couple on earth do not really live together in the sense that most married persons do.

"There are weeks when do not see each other," Mrs. Ellis confided to me. "I cannot imagine that two persons can live together 365 days of the year for a lifetime without becoming horribly bored. If I had never separated from my husband I feel sure that I could not have written the romantic love letter, really a wild letter, that I sent him this morning just before you came."

Mrs. Ellis told me her age with a dauntlessness that is perhaps her most distinguished characteristic. Blunt eyes that have kept their merriment for half a century, a fine valor which has braved the embattled prudes of the world and fought its hypocrites single handed, short, rough, snow-dusted chestnut hair that waves away from a Byronic brow, a kindling smile, an erect carriage—such is England's foremost feminist.

"What do you consider the most important demand of the woman movement?" I asked her.

"The economic independence of women," she replied. "Until love is freed from the obligation of support no man can know that he is loved for himself, no woman can be sure of the disinterestedness of her affection. I believe, of course, that every man should support his child up to the age of 21.

"But love must be freed from commercialism. And in order to do this we shall have to try many experiments. One of the experiments I propose I call anovitiate of marriage. I don't use the expression novitiate as equivalent to trial marriage. If two people were to inhabit the same house, the man living with the girl's family for one year, it would be impossible to conceal small habits, peculiarities and moods which sometimes play great havoc with marriage as a vice itself. Such an experiment, a novitiate for marriage, would tend to diminish the evil effects of the sex-spell, the magnetic attraction between a man and a woman which hypnotizes their reason."

FRUIT PROSPECTS GOOD.

Large Yield of All Crops, Except Peaches, Is Expected.

Washington, June 1.—General prospects for a large yield of fruit of all kinds, with the possible exception of peaches, have not been equaled at any time within the last decade, except in 1911, according to the report of the United States chamber of commerce's committee on statistics and standards on condition of fruits on May 20 last. The report deals with all fruits of commercial importance, including apples, peaches, pears, plums and prunes, grapes, oranges, lemons, grapefruit, strawberries, cherries and others. The committee reports that more or less damage has occurred in nearly all regions to fruits, but that except in the case of peaches, it is not a matter of much moment.

It looks as though the high coiffure uncovering the forehead and ears is to be short-lived.

In separate skirts there is a liking for very loud effects. Mustard and black check, with sometimes a bar of green, are perhaps the favorite colors.

Roman stripe materials are smartest when blue and green predominate.

The bustle effect is achieved on some tailored suits by a fan plaiting of silk put on at the back of the hips.

Mist blue is one of the loveliest colors. It is much more becoming than turquoise blue.

There are such a wonderful variety of tunics that every woman must be able to find something which suits her.

NO SYMPATHY.

"Waiter," said the man in the hotel dining room, "there's a fly in this ice cream."

"Serves him right, sir," replied the waiter. "Let him stay there and freeze to death. He was in the soup yesterday."

Young Boy Has Talent

MELVIN HONECK.

Master Melvin Honeck, thirteen years old, and son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Honeck, of Cottage avenue, gave a piano recital in Flick's hall on Saturday evening that was heard by many friends and acquaintances who gave the young performer much encouragement and praise. Master Honeck is a talented boy and has worked hard to accomplish many things generally not done at so youthful an age. He played very well, entirely from memory, and some numbers quite difficult, in a way that deserved much commendation both from his teaching and for his ability and natural taste. Miss Esther Ohneck sang a group of songs as a part of the pleasing program. Both performers are pupils of Miss Herrick.

AT THE EMPRESS

When a man and woman have been married, have "little tots," and then through some treacherous acts of outsiders are parted through jealousy on the part of the man there is always a warm feeling on the part of mankind for the mother when the father is given the children and they are snatched from the loving arms of the one who brought them into the world. This is a part of the story told in "The Fatal Wedding," which will be shown tonight at the Empress theater for the last time tonight.

"The Outlaw's Reform," another truly human and interesting western comedy, will start tomorrow afternoon. This film has been highly spoken of everywhere it has been shown.

Fort Wayne people are appreciating the success of the Empress in showing high first run features and are filling the house each afternoon and evening. They are also appreciating the "coolest spot in town."

KITCHEN KINKS.

When threading a needle take a white envelope, stick the needle through and draw it down until the eye is visible, and you will thread the needle like magic. The white surface of the paper sets the eye into relief, as if it were magnified. A stout paper or envelope is the best, as it holds the needle more securely.

Where screws are driven into soft wood and subjected to considerable strain, they are very likely to work loose, and it is often very difficult to make them hold. In such cases the use of glue is profitable. Make the glue thick; immerse a stick about half the size of the screw, and put it into the hole; then put in the screw and drive it home as quickly as possible.

BICYCLE AND AUTOMOBILE COLLIDE

An automobile belonging to a contractor and a bicycle ridden by Lewis Weidelman, of 472 Wiebke street, crashed together Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the corner of Lafayette and East Creighton avenue. The rider of the bicycle was thrown to the pavement and received a deep gash above the right eye. Dr. Ray, who lives nearby, took the injured youth into his office where he attended him.

General Manager S. W. Greenland of the Fort Wayne & Northern Indiana Traction company, left Monday morning for Philadelphia on business. He will be absent from the city for several days.

AMERICAN WOMEN WHO ARE WIVES OF THE GREAT

Mrs. Oscar W. Underwood

HARRIS & EWING

Frankly, friendly, open-hearted Mrs. Underwood has two great hobbies of which she is very proud.

The first is her husband, Oscar W. Underwood. The second is politics.

Mrs. Underwood is as familiar with the tariff as many women are with the new fashions. And she is fond of her husband's work in congress as he is, it is said.

Mrs. Underwood is a southern woman and has all the charms of the southerner. She is very accomplished, much traveled and well read.

She has spent every congressional season in Washington since her marriage, nine years ago. And she is perfectly resigned to stay in the heat of Washington all summer if there is an extra session of congress which requires her husband's presence.

"Since her earliest girlhood," Mrs. Underwood avows, "I have had a craze for politics. I confess to this reluctantly, perhaps because down south we are so conservative with regard to women in politics.

"I think men and women rarely accept a woman in good faith when she declares the consuming interest of her life is national politics.

"She gets the credit for either being silly or affected, and almost never for the ability to really comprehend national issues."

Mrs. Underwood doesn't think the majority of women have a clear grasp of politics. But she thinks this is because many of them dislike the subject and don't care to bore themselves to consider any of its phases.

"You won't find me saying that women can't understand fully anything they choose to understand. But when it comes to this matter of politics the majority of them are simply indifferent," she concludes.

As to clothes Mrs. Underwood is extremely quiet. She dresses in very simple style, but it is the simplicity which only the smartest of modistes can achieve.

She is not a suffraget. She doesn't even belong to a woman's club. And when it comes to old fashioned ideas about large families she just smiles and speaks the name of Mme. Schumann-Heink. Her admiration for the great diva who has eight children, as well as a great career, is unbounded.

RALPH HERZ AND OCTAVIA BROSKE IN "MADAME MOSELLE."

New York, June 1.—It took a new producing firm to hop right into the season's first hot spell with a musical-comedy venture.

With theater doors closing to the right of them, and to the left, two daring individuals, named Chase and Everall, rode into the Shubert with "Madame Moselle."

The name of this production is reminsdful of "Madame Sherry," it will be noted; but, whereas "Madame Sherry" was a great success, "Madame Moselle"—well—she's another vintage entirely.

With a little fixing up in the way of added ginger, and the acquisition of one or two "whistly" songs, she may yet gather the coin; but just at the present the utmost efforts of Ralph Herz, Octavia Broske, Diane Aubrey, Jack Henderson, Ernest Lambart, William Pruette, and some other really capable people fail to make the Madame sparkle as Moselle ought to sparkle.

This is the time of the year to learn what have been the really big successes of the year. Only the fittest survive the middle of May.

There is no possible doubt as to what the great money-makers of the past season have been—and still are—"Potash & Perlmutter" and "Seven Keys to Baldpate" have played to packed houses ever since they opened, early last fall, and promise to run many months more.

Other profitable plays still doing business are "To Many Cooks," "A Pair of Sixes," "The Yellow Ticket," "The Things That Count," "Kitty Mackay," "Today," and "The Dummy"—eight successes, all told, out of perhaps fifty dramatic productions.

In Musical comedy, Arthur Hammerstein and Henry W. Savage are the only ones who have rung the cash register bell—the former with "High Jinks" and the latter with "Sari." There is no other survivor out of perhaps a score of productions.

Gen. Funston's Great Story, "Memories of Two Wars"

The Marvelous Bravery of Janny and Rodolfo at Guaimaro.

(In the foregoing chapter Gen. Funston told of the junction of the rebel forces of General Gomez and General Garcia, making a total of 3,000 men and adding two pieces of artillery. Then they marched on the town of Guaimaro defended by a strong force of Spanish also with artillery. We left it for this chapter to tell the story of that famous siege.—Editor.)

CHAPTER VI.

By GEN. FREDERICK FUNSTON, Brigadier General, United States Army.

It had been determined to use but one gun in the attack on the Gonfu blockhouse, and this was the twelve-pounder that belonged to Garcia's command. The piece was in position before daylight, with Osgood in personal command.

Gen. Funston.

After it was fairlight we saw a flash of flame and smoke from the shrubbery behind which the gun position had been constructed, and almost simultaneously a shell struck the ground a few yards short of the blockhouse, but on the ricochet went through it without exploding.

The sixteen Spaniards in the little fort were on the lookout, ready for business, and in a few seconds came their fire, a continuous crackle, as they were using their magazine rifles at top speed.

At first they fought from the lower story of the blockhouse, but after the structure had been hit a couple of times they abandoned it, and took to the trenches outside. At Guaimaro there were not the bags of earth in front of the trenches that at Cascorra had given up something to shoot at the enemy having instead deep standing trenches. A man's head would be exposed for only the few seconds that it took him to empty his magazine.

Our people shot slowly and carefully, but did not succeed in diminishing the enemy's fire to any great extent. Pennie and I, animated by a desire to get a little closer to the fireworks, made a run over the gun and reached there just in time to see the Hitchkiss on its recoil knock a Cuban senseless. These twelve-pounders, very light guns for their heavy powder charge, were nearly as dangerous toward the rear as toward the front, despite the brake ropes, which were adjusted before every shot.

The bullets were coming in steadily, and keeping well down to the ground. Osgood had just remarked to me that he had accomplished all he could by driving the Spaniards from the blockhouse o the trenches outside, and that the infantry must do the rest, when a staff officer arrived to state that the Cubans were going to charge from the foot of the slope to our left.

Pennie and I hastened back to our old stand, and had hardly got settled down when a bugle rang out in the edge of the woods a hundred yards to our left, there were a number of briskly-given commands, some faint cheering and a rattle of shots, and a company of men mostly negroes, led by Garcia's chief of staff, Colonel Menocal, began to climb the grassy slope.

Ordinaarily chiefs of staff do not lead charges, but no chances were being taken on some bungler making a mess of this job. The slope was so steep and the grass so high and dense that the attack was made at a walk, the men in single line, firing and yelling excitedly.

"EVERY SPANIARD IN GUAIMARO COULD SEE HIM, AND I BELIEVE TO A MAN TRIED TO BRING THE GALLANT FELLOW DOWN."

Pennie and I watched for a few seconds, when he said, "Me for this," and we started for the blockhouse, and at the same time saw Janney, Latrobe and one or two others cutting across from the gun position, with revolvers drawn.

The first man through the wire entanglement and into the trench was Janney, who had joined the attacking company just before it reached the summit.

The Spaniards had no waited for the Cubans, but had bolted, and were doing a marathon for the Isabella fortin, distant seven hundred yards. The victors fired on them from around the captured blockhouse, and killed one man about a hundred yards down the slope.

The mob of men about the captured position now made a fine target, and from every blockhouse, the church, the barracks and other points came a most terrific and well-sustained fire.

The summit of the hill rapidly became too hot. Colonel Menocal screened some of his men in the trenches and others behind the blockhouse, but he sent about half of them down the hill, not, however, until several of them had been hit.

Of course, something ridiculous had to happen. A chicken which the late garrison had evidently hoped to add to their next bill of fare escaped in the confusion and ran cackling around the blockhouse half a dozen times, pursued by Pennie, who finally killed it by throwing his machete at it.

In the meantime a number of us had entered the blockhouse and were exploring it. The lower story was littered with broken timbers, and a barrel of drinking water had been pierced at about its middle by a shell, but without destroying it or knocking it over. The remaining half barrel of water quenched many a thirst that day.

In the upper story we found a number of boxes of hard biscuit and some other food, and, after filling our pockets, began pitching the balance out to the men hugging the lee side of the building to escape the storm of bullets still sweeping the hill. A Spanish soldier, wounded by a shell, had fallen across one box of biscuits and had bled there so profusely that half of them were saturated, but it was no time to be fastidious.

In the meantime several officers of General Garcia's staff had reached us and called attention to the Spanish flag still floating from the pole on the blockhouse. This would never do, and it must come down; but it could not be lowered, being nailed to the staff. One of these officers, Lieut. Luis Rodolfo Miranda, said he would bring down the flag. With assistance, Miranda reached the roof and slowly and painfully began drawing himself up the pole, which was about eighteen feet high and four inches in diameter. Every Spaniard in Guaimaro could see him and, I believe, to a man tried to bring the gallant fellow down. Bullets hissed and crackled all about and beat a constant tattoo on the blockhouse. The pole above or below him was hit several times.

For a few moments that seemed endless we looked on in an agony of suspense. We begged him to give it up and wait for night, but he kept on, reached the flag, cut it loose with his pocket knife, slid down the pole with it, ran to the eaves and leaped to the ground, fifteen feet below. It would be difficult to imagine a feat more reckless and daring, and yet I have heard some of my own countrymen damn the whole Cuban people as a race of cowards!

Devine spied a magnificent saddle horse tied to a long rope in a little swale about 200 yards to our left front and about 500 yards from two of the Spanish blockhouses. The horse, being out of the line of fire, had not been hit, but was snorting with terror.

"That horse would suit my style of beauty," remarked Devine, and he started down the hill on a run. Once at the foot of the slope he was in plain sight from three blockhouses, two of them quite close, and every man in them did his best to "get" him. He reached the rope and untied it, but the terrified beast declined to follow and soon was brought down. Devine, having no use for a dead horse, started back up the hill. Osgood and I were breathlessly watching him from adjoining portholes when we saw him pitch forward into the grass.

Osgood cried out, "My God! he is hit! I am going after him!" and started down the ladder. Reaching the outside, we found that Janney was running down the hill, racing like mad. The enemy now concentrated their fire on him, as they had on Devine. Janney was a powerful man, and he half carried and half dragged the wounded man up that s lope under a fire that it would see impossible a man could live through, it being especially severe after he hd got half way up and was exposed to nearly all the Spanish positions.

Several of us assisted him to lower Devine into the shelter of the trench. He was shot in the hip—a very severe wound, from which he did not recover during the war.

In our service, Janney's act would have brought him the Medal of Honor, or in the British army the Victoria cross. (Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons.)

SEASON'S FIRST CANTELOPES SELL FOR TWO DOLLARS APIECE.

BETTY CORELLA TESTING THE FIRST CANTALOUPE OF THE SEASON.

Los Angeles, June 1.—"Cantaloupes—ripe cantaloupes—two dollars each."

That was the cry heard here recently when the first shipment of the select Imperial valley's celebrated melons arrived.

The fruit is the best that has been placed on the local market in many seasons; large and juicy, right from the vines, where 4,000 acres of the reclaimed desert is dotted from one end to the other by cantaloupes.

"They are far better than last year," was the verdict of L. K. Small, traffic manager and assistant to the president of the American Fruit Distributers of Southern California.

Local hotel dealers were numerous as the melons were being tested and unpacked, and the larger majority went to them after some spirited bidding and each brought the usual $2. The entire shipment consisted of about thirty, a sort of advance advertisement for the big carload which will be sent soon.

The latest report states that at least 5,000 carloads of melons will be the output from Imperial valley before the season is over.

WAS LOOKING FOR WORK, NOT PLAY

Career of Ben Wallace, Indiana Circus Owner, is Interesting One.

PROMINENT AT PERU

(By FLOYD KING.)

Fifty years ago a red-headed, freckled-face little lad was running around in Miami county, Indiana, and he was looking for work, not for play. His circumstances forced him to work in order to support his widowed mother; fortunately he liked work, and from the first position he held in a livery stable, working for 50 cents a week, up to the present time, this lad has never taken a vacation.

At one time Ben Wallace only owned the cheap overalls and suspenders he wore. He did not inherit a dollar, has never had any pull except that of his own brain. At one time, he did not have money enough to buy feed for his pet canary bird. Today he owns one of the largest herds of elephants in the country and is operating one of the largest circus organizations in the world.

Prominent at Peru.

He is president of one of the largest banking institutions in Indiana, the Wabash Valley Trust company, at Peru. He owns one of the largest department stores in the state. He owns a theater and all sorts of land holdings in that city. But chief of Mr. Wallace's wealth is centered in land. He believes land is the safest and best place for money, and if he were young now, according to his statement, he would be a simple son of the soil. Raised on a farm he has become Indiana's greatest farmer, owning and operating 3,500 acres of land that could not be bought for less than $350 per acre.

When the gorgeous street pageant of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus passes over the streets of Fort Wayne, Tuesday, June 16, the small and poor lads of the city may find encouragement in the thought that the owner of that magnificent display was once as poor as any boy, but that by following two rules, of honesty and unfailing work, he became a mighty captain of industry, his circus interests, as large as they are, being comparatively a side issue with him.

They All Know "Ben."

Every well-posted farmer in the eastern states knows of "Ben" Wallace, of Peru, Ind., just as every little tot knows of the Hagenbeck-Wallace shows. Notwithstanding his wealth, Mr. Wallace was never too busy to extend every possible thought and care to his aged mother and never too proud to stoop and speak to the poor. Today when with his shows, he is sociable with every one of the 1,000 employes. Even many of the humble workmen he calls by the first name. He classes them among his friends, just as he does capitalists and noted persons numbered among his acquaintances.

He shuns the limellght and never likes to be pointed out as "Mr. Wallace. Frequently people out of curiosity may step up to him and ask if he is Mr. Wallace. He is almost sure to answer, "I am the boss hostler,' however, not denying that he is Mr. Wallace.

One Enough for Him.

Although this Hoosier showman could buy and own all the circuses in the world, he has never desired to own and operate but one complete organization, which never divides or splits. Early in life it was his ambition to build up "the highest class circus in the world" and since that was attained he has constantly maintained the high standard. When buying horses, he could buy cheap animals, but he insists on buying the best. When he buys a suit of clothes, this same idea is kept in mind. He prefers to have one good suit of clothes rather than two suits that aggregate the same price.

But it was when he bought outright the great Carl Hagenbeck's animal shows a master hand was displayed in the amusement world and by the genuine combination of that unequaled animal show with his own three-ring circus, the red-headed lad of Peru, Ind., became a "circus king."

A big modern circus and menagerie probably embrace more different kinds of system and discipline than any other business in which men engage for profit. It is a fact not generally known that the average number of circuses starting out each spring would foot up to the amazing total of 200. Where they go no one knows. They start out buoyantly enough, but somehow they never seem to get back. When one considers that this has been going on in America for the past 75 years, it is really remarkable that so few men have succeeded in the circus business. It seems pretty clear that a variety of genius not common is necessary to become a successful circus proprietor.

There are only three or four well-known circus enterprises today, and two of them, "Hagenbeck" and "Wallace," are among the most prominent. The combination of the Wallace circus as made several years ago with the Hagenbeck animal aggregation has developed a show different from the other circuses—the trained wild animals giving a feature both interesting and pleasing.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

BREAKS IN LUCK FOR THE LOCALS

Bratchi Bounds Ball Off of Pitcher's Knee and Wins a Game.

PUT ON A THRILLER

Did you ever watch a particulary close and exciting game of baseball and note that the break in luck generally marks the turning part and governs the result?

Freddie Bratchi got the break for Fort Wayne in the seventh inning of the opening game with Grand Rapids and it won for the home talent by a score of 3 to 1 in as neat a baseball match as was ever staged on the Varnell campus.

Take these games one after another and there is, as a rule, some little occurrence that upsets either one side or the other and renders final judgment on the outcome of the combat.

Bratchi's break came when he bounded a ball off Pitcher Paynter's knee in the seventh inning, a happening that converted what ordinarily would have been an easy out from the shortstop to first, into a two-base hit.

If the ball had gone an inch one way or the other it would have been difficult to handle as two men were out and the infield playing back. Smykal opened the inning with a single and after [illegible] had advanced him with a bunt, Fr[illegible]ble shot a short single to left that Smykal raced home on. Martin hit to right but Bramble was held at second and a pass filled the bases. Holderman forced Bramble at the plate but Bratchi's bounder caromed off the pitcher's knee and rolled out of the way of the shortstop and the third baseman and before the left fielder could come in and retrieve it two runs had crossed the plate and the hitter had reached second.

Up to this inning Paynter had held Fort Wayne to a trio of singles but had pulled through in safety the only two times he was in any danger. Up to the seventh it looked like some high class pitching was going to waste on account of a lucky infield scratch made by Tydeman, and with which he opened the second inning.

Hughes followed with a single that sent his outfielder to third but he was forced at the plate. Hughes reached third and McLafferty erred on Castle's grounder and Grand Rapids' only marker was chalked up. Bramble did not get into trouble again until the seventh, when Hughes was passed with one down.

With a double play in sight on Killelea's grounder, Smykal muffed Brant's throw at second and two men were safe. Castle's grounder advanced both runners but he was nipped at first and then McLafferty staged a piece of fielding that squared him for his bobble in the second. He came across the diamond like a whirlwind after Stell's slow grounder and by a great stop and a greater throw he cut down the opposing short fielder at first.

Bramble displayed the best form he has ever shown here. The two hits in the second and a solid smash by Hughes to center in the ninth were the only hits he allowed. Eddie Justice tried to pull off his famous bunt down first base line and lost out on it. He was given a hand when he first went to the plate.

Brant made one of the sensational plays of the afternoon when he nipped Tydeman at first on a hit over second that looked good for a safe single.

Grand Rapids has a nicely balanced infield now, and while George Hughes is not the finished player at first that his predecessor was, he gets 'em, and that is all the position requires.

In addition to picking off the single that tied the score, Bramble got a couple of outs at first on nince plays in covering the bag.

DICKER FOR THE REAPERS IS OFF

Springfield Ardor Cools Off When It Comes to the Cold Cash.

(Springfield News.)

Sol Meyer, of Indianapolis, still has a baseball club and franchise on his hands and the chances are that he will continue to be a magnate as far as local parties are concerned.

What he will do with the Reapers will depend on the action of the other club owners. He issued an ultimatum to the local public and fans that they must buy or he would transfer the club to some other city, stating that he had several offers.

Mr. Ra[illegible]'s representative, came here, put [illegible] $3,000 on Meyer's belongings [illegible] club and announced that [illegible] persuasion Meyer had sec[illegible]nt of President Hellbroner to [illegible] the club to Youngstown if he agreed to pay the difference in mileage to the visiting clubs. Mr. Lenihan went farther. He informed the local stockholders that Kalamazoo, Mich., had offered Meyer a large bonus to move his team to that city.

Announcement that the club was to be moved created considerable interest and after some dickering Meyer granted an option that expired Wednesday. Then an investigation was started as to what rights local parties would acquire if the club was taken over. Announcement was made that the investigation had proven satisfactory and that there was no reason why Meyer's stock should not be purchased.

Then came the rub. The plan was to raise $5,000 by issuing additional stock. Of this sum $3,000 was to be paid Meyer and the remainder used to place the team on a good financial basis. At a meeting held $4,800 was subscribed. When parties interested started forth to collect enough money to satisfy Meyer they ran into a snag. One man, who had subscribed $500 worth of stock, declined to produce, claiming that he labored under the impression that the land on which the ball park is located was included in Meyer's offer. Another, who had subscribed $500, asked to be let off with $200.

These and other obstacles dampened the ardor of those in charge and the deal is said to be off unless a Richmond can be found. It is not thought that he will be forthcoming. For several days a report has been circulated that one man would take over the team. When told yesterday that his chance had arrived he decided that he did not want any of it.

There is a possibility that President Hellbroner will step in and take charge of the club for the league, and yet this move can hardly be made at the present time. President Hellbroner, who came here at the request of the local stockholders, stated at the meeting that Meyer had not mentioned the transferring of the club to him. Meyer has met all financial obligations to the league promptly and until this season has had a team up in the race. Until Meyer asks for a transfer of the franchise President Hellbroner will probably be powerless to act.

The league forced Annis to sell the Grand Rapids franchise to Essick and it forced Wagner to dispose of the Terre Haute club. There were reasons for these actions. Meyer, it is claimed, has never opposed a single move for the benefit of the league, and he has a clean slate.

Kalamazoo is in the South Michigan league, and there is no chance for Meyer to move the team there. If Youngstown is the destination another schedule would have to be adopted besides the paying of the mileage between Springfield and Youngstown would make it quite expensive.

The fans will patiently await developments. It seems to be Mr. Meyer's next move, according to their way of thinking.

Golfers In Base Ball May Hold Tournament After World Series.

THREE OF THE BEST GOLFERS IN BASEBALL.

(By Hugh S. Fullerton.)

John Miller, then of the Pittsburg Pirates, walked into the office of President Dreyfuss last summer and remarked, seriously:

"Barney, I'm afraid I'll have to quit baseball. It is interfering with my golf."

Dreyfuss, who is also a golf bug, was able to appreciate it.

If it needs any further proof of its fascination, it has secured that proof by winning over most of the baseball players in the big leagues. Nowadays if a crowd of ball players gets together, and some one wants to "fan" baseball, it is hard to get others interested; they want to talk of the drives they made, or the relative merits of an approaching cleek and a jigger in medium rough, or the best lengths of clubs.

Indeed, right now plans are under way to have a golf tournament immediately following the world's series next fall, the competitors to be major league ball players, and more than two dozen applications are filed. The tournament will be played in one of the cities in which the world's series is staged.

Almost all Connie Mack's Athletics play the game, and some of them play it exceedingly well. Chief Albert Bender is conceded to be the best of them all.

CONNIE MACK IS UNDER A STRAIN

EDDIE COLLINS TELLS

In the June American Magazine Eddie Collins, the wonderful second baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, writes an article entitled "Connie Mack and His Mackmen," in which he tells many inside facts and stories about the great Philadelphia baseball magnate. He says that Mack never tears down and always builds up, and that he is ingenious in his methods of inspiring confidence in his men. The following story taken from the article illustrates this point:

"There comes to me an incident when he built McInnis's confidence wonderfully, when 'Stuffy' was still doing bench duty. In a game against Chicago a critical situation was looming up. In the eighth inning the score was 5 to 4 against us. After two were out, Barry singled and Lapp came to bat. By this time Mack was beginning to fidget and squirm uneasily in his seat, something he always does when the crisis of a game seems about to break. I heard Harry Davis, who was then captain, say:

"'Connie! Are you going to let —— bat?'

"Davis had mentioned the pitcher, a notoriously weak hitter. I saw McInnis watching Mack out of the corner of his eyes. The youngster trembled eagerly, hoping for a chance to go to bat in the pinch, and I think Mack saw him too, for he said to Davis rather loudly:

"'You know very well who is going to hit if Lapp gets on. There's only one man I'd put up—eh?'

"Davis inclined his head toward McInnis and Mack nodded. McInnis saw all this, as Mack meant he should. Subsequently Lapp smashed out a two base hit, putting Barry on third, and McInnis, told to go to bat, rushed out from the dugout swelling with confidence. He had heard Mack as much as say there was 'no other man on the team he would trust in this pinch but me.' McInnis at that moment possessed overwhelming self-confidence. A moment later he drove out the hit that won the game. Mack's little bit of diplomacy had met with success.

"There came a situation during the last world series against the Giants that gave Schang, our young catcher, confidence. Barry was on first base and nobody was out. It was Schang's turn to go to bat, and turning to Mack he said:

"'What shall I do: put Barry over, hit?'

"'Use your own judgment,' replied Mack.

"Clearly Mack had confidence in him. An important moment in the world series, Schang doubtless thought, and Mack leaves it all with me. Now when a young ball player thinks that way he gains self-confidence; that is, if he has the right stuff in him. Well, Schang went up there and instead of doing the easy thing, sacrificing, he chose to hit and drove out a ball that let Barry race to third base.

"The moral of this incident is that it is Mack's policy to create confidence in your own ability. Any man who can do that for other men, I don't care whether it's in baseball, or finance, is a master of his profession.

"Mack always sits in the middle of the bench, the team captain on one side and the youngsters near at hand. Once he is seated, rarely does he ever get up. Even if the crowd infringes on the field and shuts off his view to right or left, I have never seen him leave his position. Seldom does he ever rise even to go to the ice cooler on the warmest day. I think it must be a superstition with him to stay in that same pose throughout the game. From the stands he looks motionless; however, he is under a terrific mental strain. He is one of the nerviest men in the world when a game is being contested. He seems to be just a bundle of nerves, drawn on the edge of the bench and ready to collapse if something out of the ordinary happens, only he never collapses; it has always been a wonder to me how the man can restrain himself from giving vent to some hysterical outburst. I know that when the game tightens he fairly writhes, and every year he wears out two suits of clothes from simply squirming around on close plays. Once on a close decision, with one of our men sliding into the home plate with the winning run at a time when winning runs meant the pennant, Mack became so excited that he half slid off the bench, and Plank yelled: 'Look out, Connie, you'll slide into the subway.'

"Every morning at 10 we gather in the clubhouse; if the team is on the road we meet in Connie's room in the hotel. We are never in session less than ten minutes or rarely more than half an hour. But in that time the game to be played that afternoon is sometimes won. Every point of the defensive and offensive strength of the opposing team is discussed. Mack will mention the pitcher that our opponents will probably use, and instantly a scheme of attack is devised. This attack varies as we meet different pitchers. Always in those morning meetings Mack goes over the entire situation and plans the battle."

BASEBALL AND ART.

(By Edmund Vance Cook.)

Baseball? I scorn to take its part
On lesser grounds than those of Art
I hear
Your sneer.
But why is not the wide, glad view
Of golden day—and action, too—
More than the little, canvassed square,
That mimicry of Nature there,
Viewed in the stagnant gallery air?
Shall I not stay and let you go
To cast yourself before Corot
And grovel down before Wattau?

Must art be ancient ere it thrive?
Why, look you here is art—alive!
To view
A hue
Like Titian loved, behold the head
Of Donahue, forenamed the Red!
Here stands "the discus thrower."
Speak!
Why better if he were antique?
Hibernian gods are good as Greek!
Why should New York and its vicinity
Bow down before a Greek divinity
When they have had their own McGinnity?

No matter of what school you be,
Though Raphaelite or Post- or Pre-,
Take heart
Of Art;
For here it is and here its fruits.
Here Hector fights and Priam roots!
Here burns the fire Time may not quench!
With brow a-frown and fist a-clench,
Achilles sulks upon the bench!
Look! look again! and gain your fill
Of Art alive, and feel its thrill!
Ajax defies the umpire still!

MEARA TO THE HIGHLANDERS.

New York, June 1.—The release of Charles Meara, outfielder of the Perth Amboy club of the Atlantic league, has been purchased by the New York Americans, according to announcement made today. Meara will report immediately. Meara, formerly played with Manhattan college. Since the opening of the Atlantic league season he has made twenty-four hits in eleven games, five of which were homers. In addition to his five home runs he has hit for four triples and one double. He has stolen eight bases.

FARMERETTE WOULD RATHER RANCH THAN DO THE TANGO.

MRS. C. E. CONANT, FARMERETTE.

San Francisco, May 29.—Mrs. C. E. Conant arrived from Honolulu recently on the liner Mateonia with a host of ideas obtained on Hawaiian plantations which she will use in the Imperial valley, where she is to be a "farmerette."

Until April 21 she was Miss Margaret Pewtress. Conant, whom she married, is a New York lawyer, who made a fortune ranching in the Imperial valley. They went to Honolulu for a honeymoon.

"Farm life is splendid," said Mrs. Conant. "I can hardly wait till I get down to the ranch. It's more fun to grow cotton than to tango, and I'd rather look after the sheep and the stock than take a vacation trip to the mid-Pacific."

HOW MORGAN GOT WASHINGTON WILL

IS FAMOUS DOCUMENT

Washington, June 1.—J. P. Morgan has revealed for the first time how the will of Martha Washington, which he refuses to return to the state of Virginia, came into the possession of his father. At the same time Mrs. William Cummings Story, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, read to that body in annual session here the entire correspondence between Mr. Morgan and Governor Stuart.

Mr. Morgan's statement follows:

"The will of Martha Washington was taken from the Fairfax court house in 1862 by a colonel in the Union army, who rescued it from destruction by his men. This officer retained it in his possession for thirty years, and shortly before his death, in 1892, gave it to his daughter, who, thirteen years later, in 1905, sold it to the late J. Pierpont Morgan.

"This account she related at the time of the transfer. She stated that her father's regiment garrisoned Fairfax Court House in 1862, and that he had headquarters in the court house. Another command had previously occupied the place and the men had broken open the safes. The floors were littered with papers, which the colonel's men used in making fires. Entering headquarters one day he found his men shoveling papers into a stove. He stopped them, and in examining the papers found the Martha Washington will.

"He carefully preserved the document throughout his life, and on the eve of his death gave it to his daughter."

Two Offers Are Made.

The correspondence read by Mrs. Story revealed that Mr. Morgan suggested to Governor Stuart two plans for the preservation of the historic document. One was that he would present the will for public exhibition at Mount Vernon, the other was that the will be preserved by the Congressional library at Washington. With both of these suggestions Mr. Morgan couples another, that George Washington's will be exhibited with it.

Mr. Morgan asserts that his reason for refusing to return the will to the authorities of Fairfax county is that the court house is not fireproof and also that the place is "out of the way." He agreed to have photographs of the document transmitted to the proper custodians and asked for the return courtesy of the receipt of photographs of the will of George Washington, which is the most valued of Fairfax county's old documents. This was turned down and legal measures threatened.

The suggestion at which Fairfax county balks completely is that the citizens of Fairfax county would agree to have the George Washington will taken to either of the places he stipulated, whereupon Mr. Morgan would gladly place the Martha Washington will beside it.

Governor Stuart has rejected this proposition. As affairs now stand it remains to be seen if the state of Virginia will press the suit against Mr. Morgan which the legislature has authorized.

Mr. Morgan, in his answer to Governor Stuart, wrote under date of March 17:

"The Fairfax county court house, from what I am informed, is not fireproof, nor are documents there kept in such a way as to make them available to any large number of people. I also understand that the original will of George Washington is at present stored in that court house.

"I suggest, therefore, that the commonwealth of Virginia, or Fairfax county, should direct the keeper of the documents in the court house to place the original will of George Washington on exhibition at Mount Vernon, for an indefinite period, where it would be available for the instruction of a large number of people, and where it would have the benefit of the great care and protection against fire now given to Mount Vernon.

"If this were done, I should be very glad to present the will of Martha Washington to the Mount Vernon Ladies' association for permanent exhibition there. * * * Should the commonwealth of Virginia not be willing to do this * * * I propose that the commonwealth should present the will of George Washington to the library of congress, to be forever kept within the public records there, and I should present the will of Martha Washington to the nation for the same disposition."

In objecting to both these plans, Governor Stuart, under date of April 8, reiterated that "the people of Virginia hold that the Martha Washington will is a part of the records of Fairfax county, and that it belongs there, if anywhere in Virginia."

To this Mr. Morgan replied, under date of April 17:

"The dispositions which I proposed, reached in deliberation, still impress me as the best that could be made of these historic documents, and their declination leaves me at a loss for additional suggestion."

BRINGS OUT NEW VEHICLE.

E. W. Sigl Invents Five Passenger Side Car.

E. W. Sigl, foreman of the Pennsylvania master mechanic's drafting room, has secured patents upon a side car for motorcycles which he had on the streets demonstrating Saturday night and which he claims is a decided improvement over all other side cars. Mr. Sigl's car has two seats which will comfortably accommodate three passengers and with provision on the motorcycle for carrying two, it makes the carrying capacity of the side car five persons. The rigiflex as Mr. Sigl calls his side car, can be readily attached to any kind of a motorcycle and it can be mounted on any size wheel from eighteen inches to thirty or more inches, according to the size of the machine to which it is to be attached. The advantages this side car possesses over other cars is the total elimination of side-draft and its flexibility in turning corners, its capacity being 45 degrees without inconvenience to the occupant. In the trial trips around the city Saturday the Rigiflex carried 1,000 pounds and with this heavy load there was no apparent side-draft. Mr. Sigl expects to sell the manufacturing right to some manufacturer of side cars.

TELEGRAPHER BOOMERS MEETING

Greatest Gathering of Operators to Occur Tonight.

The Pennsylvania Telegrapher Booster club, which will meet in the assembly room at the Pennsylvania passenger station tonight will mark the largest gathering of telegraph operators ever assembled in Fort Wayne for any purpose. It will also be distinguished by number of participants who have been in the employ of the Pennsylvania telegraph department over a quarter of a century and who are still actively at work manipulating the keys.

L. C. Wiltshire, telegraph operator at Winona Lake, bears the distinction of being the oldest member in the service, having entered the service in July, 1868, forty-five years ago, and holding employment until 1875, when he resigned to enter other business. During his period of service Mr. Wiltshire has taught the art of telegraphy to a number of students, all of whom have become more or less prominent in railway work, and among which is Mr. Chas. E. Walton, the present head of the telegraph department of the Chicago Terminal division, Pennsylvania lines at Chicago, Ill. Mr. Wiltshire has two sons connected with the telegraph department of the Western division, Mr. L. W. Wiltshire, of Fort Wayne, and Chas. C. F. D. Aker, manager, Columbia City, Ind., entered service December, 1892.

The telegraph department of a railroad is charged with the responsibility of directing and handling all train movement and furnishing the necessary means of communication for operating the road.

The telegraph department of the Western division of the Pennsylvania company, of which Homer B. Reynolds, of this city, is the managing official, is composed of 225 telegraph operators, signalmen and linemen. The train dispatching department, of which Mr. Harry E. Hart, also of this city, is the directing official, is composed of sixteen train dispatchers and a clerk.

The territory composing the Western division extends from Crestline, Ohio, to Clarke, Ind., or a total distance of 255 miles. If the wires between these points were stretched into a single strand, they would make a line 6,525 miles in length. Naturally when a severe storm visits any part of this territory and trees fall over the wires, or wires become crossed, or any of the other multitude of things which do happen, it means busy times for this department.

Dotted here and there along the line are the telegraph offices to the number of seventy-five, located from two to twelve miles apart. Some of these offices are simply signal offices, where records are made of passing time of trains and through which the train dispatcher transmitts or receives information to or from passing trains. Others are interlocking towers from which the crossover or sub-tracks switches are operated, or the de-rails and "wye" switches and signals are operated at railroad crossings and other duties relating to train movement are performed. At some points the telegraph operator handles street crossing gates in connection with his other work. Again there are several stations at which telegraph offices are maintained for the accommodation of the station agent and public alone.

The Western division of the Pennsylvania company is crossed by twenty-one other steam railroads, and all but three of them, i. e., the C., H. & D. and L. E. & W. railroads at Lima, Ohio, and the Wabash railway at Fort Wayne, Ind., are protected by interlocking. The Pennsylvania company having charge of the operation of all interlocking plants on the Western division, with the exception of those at the Hocking Valley crossing at Upper Sandusky, Ohio, the Grand Trunk crossing at Valparaiso, Ind., the E. J. & E. crossing at Hobart, Ind., and the Michigan Central crossing at Tolleston, Ind. The first interlocking tower built on the Western division was at Grand Trunk crossing at Valparaiso, Ind., in 1884. The latest one built was at Plymouth, Ind., interlocking the L. E. & W., Vandalia and Pennsylvania company tracks, built in 1903.

A telegraph operator on the Western division is almost without exception a Pennsylvania man heart and soul. The division operator finds him springing up somewhere within sound of the schreeching car wheels, the roar of the exhaust and the warning whistle of the passing train, located usually in or near the small towns along the line. From childhood he has watched the performance of thousands of trains as they pass by. He becomes interested and his heart swells with pride when he goes home some night and tells the folks that the local operator or agent has consented to accept him as a telegraph student. Later on he is ready for examination and, if capable, enters on the roll as an extra operator. It is by this method then that the demand for new men is met. "Homegrown" operators prove the best, the most loyal and when time comes, the most worthy of promotion.

The Pennsylvania flower train was here this morning and left 600 plants to be set out in the parks at the new passenger station. Hutchinson, whose father is the company's chief florist who has charge of the immense green houses at Sewickley. Robert Kinsman will supervise the work of planting the flowers in the parks. He has been engaged in that kind of work for the Pennsylvania company a number of years. The flower train consisted of a coach and a baggage car, each loaded to the roof when they left Sewickley.

HAS WON WEALTH IN PHILIPPINES

H. R. Andreas, Former Soldier, on First Vacation in Sixteen Years.

EARLY ON THE JOB

San Francisco, June 1.—After sixteen years' work in the province of Ambos Camarines, in the Philippine islands, H. R. Andreas, who arrived here recently, has made his fortune.

Andreas is a hero of the early Philippine warfare. He carries the scars of gunshot and bolo slashes received in the process of the subjugation of the Filipinos.

H. R. ANDREAS.

Andreas is on his way to his home in Millville, N. J., a little town about forty miles from Philadelphia, to visit his aged parents, whom he made comfortable with the fortune he amassed in the Philippines.

For years Andreas made money out of his coconnut plantation of 2,600 acres. Three years ago it was discovered that the land was rich in gold, which could be worked at a large profit by dredging process.

Andreas is said to be worth about $150,000 and the dredgers will continue to grind out dividends while he is home on his first vacation in sixteen years.

Andreas graduated ffrom the University of Pennsylvania when he was twenty years old and went to the Philippines with the Tenth Pennsylvania volunteers in 1898.

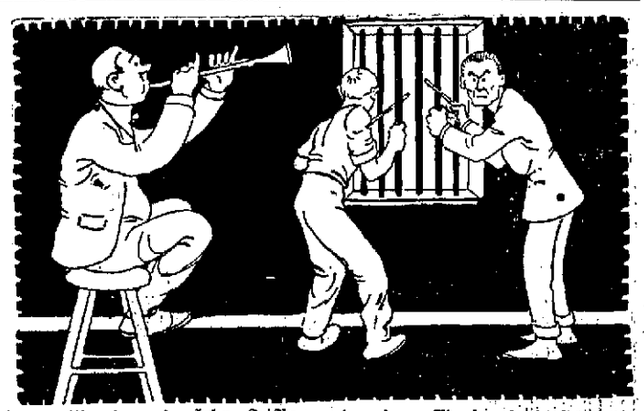
HE WAS NO SOUSA, BUT HIS RAGTIME WAS GREAT FOR A QUICK GETAWAY.



Robinson, Ill., June 1.—John Griffin is some clarinet player. He played well and he played loud.

Some of the boarders in the county "bastile" complained that Griffin made too much noise with his rag-time clarinet. They said there was a rasping note in his music that they didn't like—sounded something like a file scratching an iron bar. The knocker's didn't hurt Griffin's feelings a bit. He trumpted louder than ever. The Morning Jails Howard found the bars of Griffin's cell filed through and, the burglar and two other prisoners missing, he agreed with the crowd that Griff wasn't much of a musician, but that he was some artist to break jail with a raspy old clarinet.

PUT SULPHUR ON AN ITCHING SKIN AND END ECZEMA

Says, this old-time Eczema remedy is applied like cold cream.

Any irritation or breaking out on the face, arms, legs or body when accompanied by itching, or when the skin is dry and feverish, can be readily overcome by applying a little bold-sulphur cream, says a noted dermatologist.

He states that bold-sulphur instantly allays the angry itching and irritation and soothes and heals the Eczema right up leaving the skin clear and smooth. Bold-sulphur has occupied a secure position for many years in the treatment of cutaneous disorders because of its parasite-destroying property. Nothing has ever been found to take its place in treating the irritable and inflammatory skin affections. While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to subdue the itching irritation and drive the Eczema away and it is often years later before any eruption again appears on the skin.

Those troubled should obtain at any pharmacy an ounce of bold-sulphur cream which is applied to the affected parts in the same manner as an ordinary cold cream.—Adv.

ONE OF THESE BABIES IS BORN TO DIE—HUNDREDS GIVE UP STRUGGLE EVERY SUMMER.

THE CHILDREN OF MAN ALONE ARE DOOMED TO RUN THE GAUNTLET OF NEEDLESS SUFFERING.

(By Caroline Coe.)

During every twenty-four hours in the United States one thousand women go down to the very gates of death through the long, dark, agonizing alley of pain to bring forth a child—a tiny, helpless babe to suffer and to die within the year.

And almost all of these thousand children could be saved to grow into the maturity of helpful lives and good citizenship if the mothers who had borne them and loved them would only realize that certain material common sense should be used in rearing children.

A woman needs more than that blind animal love which will fight for her child, but does not take the trouble to use common sense and patience in its care. Many young mothers error through ignorance, and then when too late grieve over little open graves.

The whole brute creation rears its young with a certainty of it arriving at maturity without sickness of any sort. The children of man alone are doomed to run the gauntlet of cruel and needless suffering.

Every mother should know that not only nature's cure, but nature's prevention of many of the ills that attack young babies is mother's milk. But experience has demonstrated that even this liquid food must be of such quality and quantity and received at such intervals as to admit of perfect digestion and rapid assimilation.

After the birth of your child do not dose it with saffron tea, sweetened water or diluted cow's milk until your milk "comes."

In the breasts of the mother there is a substance secreted known as colostrum—thinner than milk and very scant, but it is nature's prescription for cleansing the digestive organs of the new-born child. Thus the child should be put to the breast as soon as the mother has recovered from her travail.

During the first month the baby should be fed every two hours, never oftener. (I am presupposing that the mother's milk is good and contains the normal amount of nutrition.)

After that until the baby is weaned, once in three hours, with an effort to cut down night feeding, is often enough.

Always sit upright when nursing your baby, whether night or day, and no infant should be allowed to nurse longer than twenty minutes.

Where there is plenty of milk and the child is lusty, ten or twenty minutes are enough unless the milk is scanty. The child should nurse from but one breast at each feeding, and it should not be allowed to take its meal too rapidly, as this is liable to produce hiccough and spitting up of food.

The spitting up of food immediately after feeding means that the baby is taking more than its stomach will hold comfortably. Stop nursing if this occurs. If the spitting up occurs some time after feeding, it means indigestion, probably because the milk is too rich. In this case the child should have one or two tablespoons of water before feeding.

A woman who does much work about her house should wash her nipples with a solution of boracic acid each time before feeding the baby.

Don't think that every time the baby cries it is hungry. It may be crying because it has eaten too much.

Above all else, don't feed your baby anything but breast milk until it is six weeks old. After that a little orange juice, oatmeal or barley water may be given, under nurse's or physician's orders.

Whitley County News.

Columbia City, Ind., June 1.—Oscar Fleming, the young navy lad who returned to his home in Thorncreek township, after serving his full time in the navy, will not return to the seat of trouble, but instead has accepted employment at the Miller Dairy farm.

Mrs. Ida Lore-Wagoner, who suffered a fracture of her leg near the knee six weeks ago, is now able to get around with the use of a crutch and the injury is knitting nicely.

Nine bids have been filed with the postmaster for the carrying of mail to and from trains to the local postoffice. Judd Windle, the present incumbent of the position, is receiving $700 annually, and thinks that he can better himself by accepting other employment.

The teaching staff of the public schools for the next year will be the same as the recently closed term, with the exception of four teachers, Miss Marie Galbreath, Miss Frances Dinkmeyer, Miss Kate Baker and Miss Blanche Magley retiring. Their respective places will be filled by Firmer Born, Thomas B. McGuire, Miss Ruth Donahue and Miss Mabel Blake. J. C. Sanders will remain superintendent.

Mrs. Mary E. Smith vs. William Sanford Smith is the title of the latest divorce case to be filed in the circuit court. The parties to the suit are residents of Jefferson township.

Supt. Frank Shultz, of the city electric and water plant, has notified the merchants that unless they agree to live up to their contract of keeping live light bulbs in the ornamental street lights, that he will shut off the current and leave the city in darkness rather than see the ugly spectacle of only part of the lamps burning and the other part in darkness.

Misses Ethel Hiner, Winona Mickey and Mabel Murch, of Butler, who were the guests of Misses Hazel Harrison and Ethel Weick for several days, have returned to their home.

Thomas Pontius, Thomas Hildebrand, Mr. and Mrs. William Pogue, Keller Sheeler, W. H. Kissinger, Walpole Kaler, J. C. Sanders, Elmer Grant and Harry Bollinger, John Clapham, Lloyd Bailey and Elmer Ricker formed three auto parties who left Friday for Indianapolis to attend the races.

A compilation of the graduates from 1881 to 1912, from the high school, shows that out of the 408 graduates 5 have become lawyers, 136 teachers, 2 dentists, 8 doctors, 13 merchants, 51 tradesmen and women, 83 day laborers, 66 girls, miscellaneous, and 8 boys farmers. Twenty boys and sixteen girls from the classes of 1908-1912 are yet attending college.

Jacob Plattner is confined to his home with a severe case of erysipelas in his foot.

The following committees, with the chairman of each, is below given for the handling of the Lincoln Chautauqua in July and August, for which enough tickets have already been subscribed to insure the entertainments: Advertising, W. H. Kissinger, chairman; tickets, W. H. Carter, chairman; grounds and seats, M. L. Galbreath, chairman; entertainment, D. V. Whiteleather, chairman; music, Attorney B. J. Bloom, chairman. The officers of this year's association are J. C. Sanders, president; Samuel F. Trembley, vice president; Hugo Logan, treasurer; A. R. Fleck, secretary.

Fred Yontz, Donald Warren and Miss Merle Weick have gone to Indianapolis to visit relatives. Miss Ethel Weick also accompanied the party.

Homer Eberhard has arrived home from Purdue university, where he graduated from a two year course in pharmacy. He will attend the commencement exercises at Lafayette next week and return and accept a position in the Mier and Keiser drug store.

HUMAN ALARM CLOCK AWAKENS HUNDREDS OVER TELEPHONE.

MISS ELLEN JOHNSON, "HUMAN ALARM CLOCK."

Seattle, Wash., June 1.—Ellen Johnson is one of Seattle "human alarm clocks." Every night there are some 250 to 300 ordinary alarm clocks lost, strayed or stolen, or otherwise destroyed in this city.

So when Willie who juggles neckties in a downtown department store, wants to be sure that he'll not oversleep, he turns in an emergency call to the chief supervisor at the telephone office.

Willie has to take an oath or an affirmation that his usual alarm clock is "busted" or stolen.

The chief supervisor is very inquisitive on that point and will not consent to help out except in an emergency case.

If Willie satisfies her that her aid must come forth or he'll lose his job, Miss Johnson or one of the "human alrm clocks" is notified to call him at an appointed time.

Miss Johnson alone wakes 20 to 30 people every morning.

"Of course, we don't do that except in emergency cases," she says, "and we don't ring the same number indefinitely. They've got to buy real alarm clocks after a few days. The company allows us to wake people only as a matter of accomodation to them and not as a privilege to which they're entitled."

DOCTOR TELLS HOW TO SHED BAD COMPLEXION.

We cannot restore degenerated facial tissue any more than we can restore a lost limb. It is useless to attempt to convert a worn-out complexion into a new one. The rational procedure is to remove the complexion instead—remove the devitalized cuticle. Not by surgical means, however, as the underlying cutis is too thin, too tender, to withstand immediate exposure. Applying ordinary mercolized wax will gradually absorb the offending cuticle. By degrees, a new, youthful skin appears; a skin soft and delicately tinted as a rose petal.

No lady need hesitate to try this. Procure an ounce of mercolized wax of the druggist. Spread on a thin layer before retiring, removing this in the morning with soap and water. In from one to two weeks the complexion is completely transformed.

An approved treatment for wrinkles is provided by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. Bathing the face in the solution brings prompt and remarkable results.—Dr. R. Mackenzie in Popular Medicine.

ASTOR WILL GIVE UP YACHT NORMA

Offers Handsome Vessel to United States if It is Needed

FOR WAR PURPOSES

Washington, June 1.—Vincent Astor's friends say that he may offer his beautiful yacht Noma to the government for service in the Mexican controversy, if she is needed.

Before the illness of Vincent Astor, when he and his bride, who was Miss Helen D. Huntington, were planning a honeymoon cruise on the Noma, an order was given to refurnish the yacht at an expense of $70,000.

This sum was added to expenditures much greater than had preceded it. The yacht was already as elegant as anything afloat; so the extra furnishings were intended, no doubt, to make it more like Paradise.

Other changes were made in the machinery to increase the speed of the engines and their power. The yacht today, therefore, is not only one of the most comfortable and luxurious boats afloat, but also the best equipped mechanically.

The wireless equipment is of the latest and the best. The yacht is lighted and heated by electricity, but has fireplaces, easy chairs, full beds, a library, business office for the owner, a beautiful saloon drawingroom and bathrooms—everything in fact, that a millionaire would require ashore.

In the so-called bridal chamber is a beam ceiling, solid brass bed, mahogany chiffonier, tapestry curtains and diffused electric light to illuminate the apartment.

In the music room is a miniature player piano. The mantel here is of solid marble.

GET RID OF YOUR RHEUMATISM.

By using one bottle of it I was entirely cured." For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

Cost of Purchase vs. Cost of Results

Which Do You Consider of Greatest Importance?

There are two costs to every gas range, the purcahse cost and operation cost. One gives you ownership and the other gives you results.

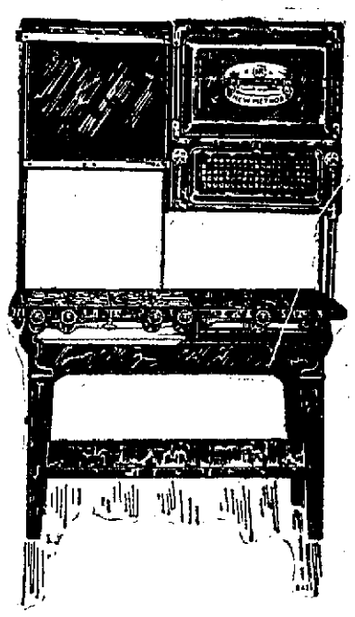
A house wife owned a gas range that was always out of repair. Each week she ruined several loaves of bread, a cake or two and a pound or more of meat. The weekly loss was about the same. Her gas bill was never under $2.00 monthly.

Finally she realized the necessity of buying a new gas range. This time she resolved to buy a good one. She bought a new Method Gas Range at our store and paid $30.00 for it. She saved the 75c weekly that she formerly lost through too much or too little heat, and this totaled $39 yearly, or more than the entire cost of a range.

Her gas bills were reduced to $1.25 monthly.

Saving her another 75c monthly, or $9 per year, a grand total saving of $48.

Remember, when selecting your new gas range that its operating cost is the most important, and remember, too, that New Method Gas Ranges are guaranteed to use from 20% to 40% less gas, and to give more perfect baking result than any other gas range made.



New Method Gas Ranges are sold exclusively at our store

DEATH AHOY!

Posey County's Notable Century of First Things

Often Ridiculed Section Down in "Pocket" of Indiana Will Soon Celebrate —Has Had Remarkable History.

New Harmony, Ind., June 1. New Harmony is to hold a centennial celebration the week of June 6-13, which will recall to the attention of at least a part of the world the remarkable socialistic community attempted in this country by Robert Owen almost a hundred years ago. Americans seldom hear of New Harmony these days, unless they chance to be riding on the Evansville branch of the Illinois Central railroad, and the average man, if asked, "What made New Harmony famous?" might be stumped for an answer.

Perhaps if the question were put, "What was the New Harmony movement?" or "Where did Robert Owen attempt his famous community settlement?" most persons would be able to recall from their sociological studies how this little out-of-the-way town on the bank of the Wabash was once famous for a time on two continents—the subject of bitter debates in halls of legislation, of editorial tirades and pulpit invectives, and how even Byron had memorialized it in "Don Juan." It probably might also occur to a still smaller number that the issues at stake in this long-ago effort to establish an ideal community had, although apparently failing entirely at the time, been the basis nevertheless of at least some of the great social and industrial reforms since adopted in many parts of the world.

But the "centennial commission" of New Harmony wants to remind all the world of its former greatness, wants to be "put back on the map" and hence its plan for an eight-day celebration at which President Taft will be the principal speaker. To some it may seem an incongruous situation to have the most conservative president of the present generation appearing as chief orator at an event in commemoration of the most radical socialistic effort of the first half century of United States history. Yet it should be borne in mind that not only did "the permanent community" which Robert Owen established in New Harmony live less than two years, but that the "ten lost tribes of communism," which succeded it, have long since been scattered, and that from the original movement the New Harmony of today has inherited only some concrete educational, political and industrial reforms which get their first impetus at that time and still survive under other forms of government than that attempted by Owen and his followers.

The "centennial commission" takes cognizance of these inheritances from the Owen regime even though the great "emancipator of labor" is not himself mentioned in the program advertising the approaching event (and the subjects of "socialism" and "communism" are alike taboo in the topics assigned to the various speakers), for the advance circular makes the following boasts concerning New Harmon's part in history:

The first woman's club, the Minerva, was organized here by Miss Constance Owen Fauntleroy in 1859.

The first kindergarten was organized here in 1820.

The first free school in America was established here in 1820.

The first co-educational school was established here in 1826.

Manual training was early recognized as an important factor in the educational system.

Prohibition by administrative government was first enforced here.

The right of women to take part in local legislative government was first asserted here by Frances Wright.

Some of these claims are likely to be disputed, in just the form that they are made, but there is no doubt of the wonderfully advanced ideals entertained by this remarkable man, who came out of England's factory district to establish in the new world a community where men and women would be liberated from many of the unnecessary burdens that had been imposed upon them by tradition. But the assertion that New Harmony had the first woman's club seems to be a modest one, judging by George B. Lockwood's "The New Harmony Communities," which asserts the existence in New Harmony of the "Woman's Social society" in 1826, and says that society was in turn succeeded by the "first woman's literary club in the United States."

That Robert Owen himself always advocated equal privileges for the sexes, and that his New Harmony community afforded the first example of woman's suffrage in this country may also be conceded. There is no question that his plan of co-education attracted wide attention, although the statement that it was first tried in New Harmony may be questioned. The educational part of Owen's program is one of the remarkable features of it, viewed at this late day, and it seems almost incredible that he should have attracted, as he did, to such a remote, out-of-the-way place the notable list of scholars (including William Maclure, Joseph Neef, Charles A. Lesueur, Gerard Troost, Thomas Say and others), who were eager to help carry out his dreams. But that the public appreciated it is shown by the fact that pupils came to New Harmony even from New York and Philadelphia, and in 1826 the task of reaching New Harmony (which even today is far away from the main lines of travel) was no small one.

Yet the term "kindergarten" as applied to the New Harmony ventures for the education of children will be disputed by most of the present-day kindergarten workers, who credit Froebel with being the first kindergarten teacher, in 1837. Then Owen's own writings say that his "infant" schools in New Harmony were adapted after the "infant" schools which he previously had conducted in New Lanark before coming to America, so that, admitting that infant schools and kindergartens are really the same thing, New Harmony can hardly be credited with the first kindergarten.

Lockwood's history confirms the statement, however, that "the boys and girls were received on the same terms" at the New Harmony school, and that the instruction provided for them was the same; and it also describes at some length the nature of the manual training that was given.

Most of the claims made in behalf of New Harmony, therefore, by the committee in charge of the celebration, appear to be fairly well founded, and the little old town in the southwestern corner of Indiana, which so seldom is heard of in these days, really has a history that deserves attention at the passing of its centenary.

Owen did not reach New Harmony until December, 1825, so that it is necessary to go back to still another movement to explain why the centennial is scheduled for 1914. This is because of the existence previous to the arrival of Robert Owen and his followers, of the sect known as the Rappites, disciples of George Rapp, an emigrant from Southern Wuertemburg, who came to America in 1804, and after first locating in Pennsylvania migrated in 1814 to the banks of the Wabash in Southern Indiana, where they established a community which they called "Harmonie." This was in many ways a socialistic organization, although lacking the intelligence that characterized the Owen movement. The Rappites, nevertheless, built up a prosperous community within a short time, and for a few years Harmonie was the largest town in the territory of Indiana. But in 1824 Rapp, for various reasons, tired of his new location, and sent his son to England to negotiate the sale of all the lands which had been acquired by the colony at Harmonie. Robert Owen was at this time planning his ideal community and he effected a deal for the 30,000 acres owned by the Rappites, and the latter gave up their town and farms and vineyards and moved to a new community in Pennsylvania, which they named Economy.

Owen's followers, when they came to Indiana, changed the name of Harmonie to New Harmony.

College Co-ed Can Stand on Her Head in Big Water Tank

Madison, Wis., June 1.—Miss Lili Muensch, of Pittsburg, is the original college mermaid. When women swimmers of the University of Wisconsin saw her in the big swimming tank, head down and feet kicking above the water, half a dozen jumped in to her rescue.

"What did you do that for?" asked Miss Muensch. And to show that she was not drowning, she repeated the trick of standing on her head in the water.

There have been women long distance swimming champions and fancy divers, but Miss Muensch is said to be the first woman to stand on her head under water.

FINDS IN EUROPE BEST AND WORST

New York Journalist Tells of High and Low Places

"ACROSS THE POND"

New York, June 1.—What do you see when you go to Europe? Are the European countries better or worse than America? One can not judge by the opinions of the average traveler because they do not agree.

Many of the European tourists don't know anything about their own country, so their comparisons are not worth while.

Now comes Karl K. Kitchen, New York newspaper man and noted traveler, who tells what he saw in Europe. Kitchen was born in the central west, and he wouldn't be lost in either Oshkosh or Munich at 1 o'clock in the morning.

Kitchen recounts in this wise two score of the most striking things he saw across the Atlantic:

Best food—In Vienna and Paris.
Best opera—At La Scala in Milan.
Gayest city—Budapest.
Best subway—The Nord-Sud in Paris.
Dullest city—Rome.
Dirtiest city—Jerusalem.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, June 1.—Predictions that the Kansas yield would amount to as much as 180,000,000 bushels, had a bearish influence today on wheat. It was estimated that fewer than 40,000 acres sown would be abandoned. Prices opened ⅛@¼c off to ⅛c. up, hardened a trifle and then made a decided down shoot.

Corn weakened with wheat but rallied on account of continued averse weather in Argentine. Opening prices, which were ⅛c lower to a like advance, were followed by a setback all around but afterward by a moderate upturn.

Bullish crop advices from Illinois points brought good support for oats. The market, though, showed some sympathy with the declines in other cereals.

Provisions developed firmness owing to hog receipts being less numerous than expected. On the other hand trade lacked volume.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, June 1.—The week in the stock market opened with virtually no change from the dormant conditions which have so long prevailed. Price changes were nominal, except in Missouri Pacific and a few specialties, the former gaining a point, with two points advance for Texas company. Union Pacific and United States Steel selling ex-dividend were reactionary, that same tendency being shown by other leaders. Missouri Pacific soon yielded much of its rise on further uncertainty connected with the no extension plan which comes up for final decision today.

Another statement from President Wilson in which he attributed the business depression in part to the attitude of the railroads, was received here with some interest but failed to expert any influence. In the absence of any business from London and Paris, where the markets were observing the Whitsuntide holidays, the fall of the French ministry was ignored, local bankers attaching little financial significance to the event. Missouri Pacific continued to move uncertainly during the early session, with increased dullness throughout the list. Bonds were steady.

The market closed heavy today. Missouri Pacific dominated the market, dealings in that stock for the greater part of the session exceeding transactions in any of the leaders. The result of the note extension plan was still unsettled, when trading terminated at the day's lowest level, Missouri Pacific falling abruptly. More gold for Paris was withdrawn.

DAILY MARKET LETTER.

(Furnished by J. S. Phillips, North American Building, Fort Wayne, Ind).

Chicago, June 1.—W. W. Snow threw the biggest June wheat estimate into the pit ever known, with the chance of a total wheat crop of 900,000,000 bushels. European wheat news indicates that the nine big countries outside Russia will raise 70,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels less than one year ago. The Snow figures were questioned. He places winter wheat at 92.6; spring wheat at 96.7 and oats at 91.7. July wheat is under influence of the 10 to 12c cash wheat premium. Popular sentiment favors bulge sale.

The oats world is not afraid of a June estimate of 1,100,000 million bushels oats. A small oats crop was formerly 800,000,000 or 900,000,000 bushels. Now it is a billion. Corn bears are afraid that the June run will be small and Argentina fails to relieve their position. Packers have been successful in lowering the hog price.

Foster predicts very serious drouth between June 5 and 13. Oats and corn promise resilience. The June cotton condition of 74 is the lowest since the 70.5 of 1907 and suggests poor corn and oats conditions in many southern states.

Prices of stocks at 2:45 p. m. as follows:

Atchison, 97⅜; Smelter, 63¼; Copper, 72⅛; B. & O., 90¾; Brooklyn Rapid Transit, 92⅛; C. & O., 57⅝; Canadian Pacific, 195⅝; Erie, 29; Great Northern, 124½; Missouri Pacific, 19¼; Northern Pacific, 111; New York Central, 91⅞; Pennsylvania, 111½; Reading, 165⅛; St. Paul, 99¾; Southern Pacific, 92⅜; New Haven, 65½; Union Pacific, 155½; U. S. Steel, 61⅛.

Ex-Div. today—Southern Pacific, 1½ per cent.; Union Pacific, 2 per cent.; U. S. Steel, 1¼ per cent.

LOW SALARIES CAUSE IT.

Defalcations in United States in 1913 Put at $40,000,000.

New York, June 1.—A large surety company, of this city, in a report made public, places $40,000,000 as a conservative estimate of the defalcations throughout the United States in 1913. Thefts of $4,000,000 were reported, while insurance policies paid because of burglaries and other evidences of loss brings the total up to the first figure. Insufficient salaries are placed at the head of the causes for thefts from banks, commercial and public funds. Next under the head of causes is the carless manner in which employes and public officials check up the books of trusted officials.

Parents Arrested in Connection With Catherine Winters Case at New Castle

DR. AND MRS. W. A. WINTERS.

Detective Abel Files Affidavit of Information at Newcastle.

SEARCH IN A SWAMP

Newcastle, Ind., June 1.—Robert H. Abel, the detective employed to investigate the disappearance of Catherine Winters, aged 9, on March 20, 1913, today filed an affidavit of information in the circuit court charging Dr. W. A. Winters and his wife and W. H. Cooper, a former roomer in the Winters home, with conspiracy to commit a felony. Similar charges pending before Mayor Watkins will be dismissed, it is said, and the case turned over to the circuit court.

Search for the body of Catherine Winters was to be resumed today in a lonely swamp on a farm four miles west of this city.

A year ago the owner of the farm found a shovel lying beside a mound of newly turned earth. He took the shovel to his home and forgot the incident.

The scene was recalled vividly to his mind when he read the story of the search of the home of Dr. William A. Winters for trace of the missing girl. He had been told that many people no longer believed that the girl had been kidnaped, but feared that she had been murdered.

Reported to Detective.

The farmer reported finding the shovel to Robert H. Abel, a private detective, who has been conducting a search for the body of the girl, and plans were arranged today by Mr. Abel and Mayor J. Leb Watkins to search in the swamp. The shovel bore the mark of the Big Four railroad for which W. R. Cooper, who has been arrested on a charge of conspiracy to commit a felony in connection with Catherine's disappearance formerly worked as a telegraph operator.

The prosecution is not placing all hopes of conviction in the discovery of bits of the child's clothing in the cellar of Catherine's home, according to Prosecuting Attorney Myers. He said there were other important facts which would be brought to light Tuesday when Dr. and Mrs. Winters are arraigned before Mayor Watkins, who acts as police magistrate here.

Mayor Watkins has been the leader in the search for Catherine Winters since her disappearance. He was named by a committee as custodian of a fund which was to be raised by moving picture entertainments and public subscriptions to prosecute the search.

Sentiment in the city is nearly equally divided. Many of the citizens are angry over the tactics employed by the detective and affirm their faith in Dr. Winters and his wife, who have been residents of the city for several years.

velopment has been retarded because their systems demanded diet of different substance and each of the three babies, examined carefully, was ill only because they had not been given the sort of food best adapted to their cases.

According to the physicians, the babies had lost weight from mal-nutrition in mild degree and they had been fed on condensed milk when they really needed modified cow's milk. The physicians suggested modification of the diet according to the weight of the infant.

It was the first time that Fort Wayne ever attempted to conduct a milk depot, for the purpose of aiding mothers in the proper nourishment of their offspring. The plan was conceived by Rev. Henry B. Master, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and his idea received the endorsement of the Fort Wayne Medical society and the Woman's League. The depot is to be open each day from 10:30 till 11:30 in the morning. Two physicians and a nurse will be on hand to take care of the babies and free milk will be given to those who cannot afford to pay for it.

Each of the three infants prescribed for at the first session had at different times been in critical condition. The first was a nine and one-half month-old girl who weighed 18 pounds; the second was a five-month-old boy weighing 13 pounds and one ounce and the third infant was a five-month-old girl weighing 12 pounds and nine ounces.

The establishment of the milk depot at the First church is regarded as one of the best steps in co-operation with the better baby movement that has been started throughout this country. Mothers in every walk of life are asked to bring their children to the church where they will be examined by competent and well known physicians, their conditions will be diagnosed and the proper diets prescribed. Certified milk if needed will be supplied and in this manner those interested in the proposition, hope to aid every mother and save the lives of many babies in Fort Wayne who would possibly die because of lack of proper feeding.

Physicians and nurses will be on hand promptly at 10:30 o'clock each morning and the parents of ailing children are cordially invited to accept the aid offered.

after the commissioners had turned him down that he would appeal to the circuit court for a reversal of the decision of the commissioners. If he does this he will encounter a stiff fight. The word is out to suppress the Hiser joint. With its passing next Friday the only licensed drinking place in Washington township will have ceased to exist.

Cases against Hiser for violations of the law are pending in the circuit court, based on evidence collected by the raid Sheriff Gladieux conducted a few weeks ago.

Ninth Warders Were on Hand.

A large crowd of people from the Ninth ward were on hand when the commissioners' court went into session Monday morning to consider liquor licenses. By far the larger part of them were persons who had been leading the fight against granting a license to John Gutermuth, but there were a number of liquor dealers in that ward who were interested in the future of their business.

Gutermuth cleared the atmosphere by withdrawing his petition and the sensational battle was over. The commissioners were prepared to refuse a license to Gutermuth, but even in that event he could have taken an appeal and kept the fight going. The temperance workers in the Ninth ward announced that in the event Gutermuth had secured a license the fight would have been reopened and a blanket remonstrance to wipe the saloons from the entire ward would have been the sequel.

The fight was started by Charles Shoenfeldt, near whose home Gutermuth proposed to open a saloon. He gained support on all hands and it was only when the anti-saloon workers were assured by the commissioners that no license would be granted and by the two local breweries that no more saloons would be opened in the Ninth ward that the remonstrants withheld their big remonstrance.

"Whereas, The great and supreme Ruler of the universe has in His infinite wisdom removed from among us one of our worthy and esteemed fellow laborers, Rev. D. W. Sanders; and

"Whereas, The long and intimate relation held with him in the faithful discharge of his duties in the Eel River Township Sunday School association makes it eminently befitting that we record our appreciation of him; therefore,

"Resolved, That the wisdom and ability which he has exercised in the aid of our organization by service, contributions and counsel, will be held in grateful remembrance.

"Resolved, That the sudden removal of such a life from among our midst leaves a vacancy and a shadow that will be deeply realized by all the members and friends of this organization, and will prove a serious loss to the community and the public.

"Resolved, That with deep sympathy with the bereaved relatives of the deceased we express our hope that even so great a loss to us all may be overruled for good by Him who doeth all things well.

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of this organization; a copy printed in the local papers and a copy forwarded to the bereaved family."

to an armistice with Huerta and will come here prepared to discuss internal as well as external phases of the situation.

That the United States might insist that the proceedings be delayed until Carranza had been given an opportunity to change his attitude toward the conference was a suggestion heard before today's "conversation" was begun. It was recalled today that the rules of the Hague convention do not require that hostilities shall cease pending mediation proceedings.

Get Long Cipher Message.

The American delegates were delayed in reaching the Canadian side by the receipt of a long cipher message from Washington in relation to Constitutionalist representation. The American delegates it was reported would await the decision of the mediators on this point before delivering the Washington government's answer to the essentials of the peace plan previously outlined.

The Mexican delegates also received a long message today from their government in which Gen. Huerta was understood to give his views on proposals already made and to have added other suggestions. These may be in the form of counter propositions. The Mexican delegates had reported to Mexico City the situation brought about by the injection of the constitutionalist phase of the negotiations.
